Chop Your Head, Says Hitler.

War? Not Improbable.

Wild Cheering, BUT.

Big A. T. and T. Spends Money.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

A VIOLENT PERSON named Hitler, loose in Germany, worries some and frightens stock speculators in London by his braggings. Head of the Fascist movement, which will never rule the thoughtful people of Germany, he promises, when he comes to power, to set up the guillotine, and "heads will roll in the dust."

There is one old German named Hindenburg that words do not frighten. Mr. Hitler will do well to look to the safety of his own head.

DE BROUCKERE, Belgian senator, president of the League of Nations aviation commission, says Mussolini's government is preparing for war on the Albanian border, and along the Alps. Hitler's Fascist outburst, and his promise to guillotine those that established the German republic, is based on his belief that warlike Mussolini is with him in spirit. Senator De Brouckere's statement worries Europe.

It is just as well we are out of that league, and very fortunate that Europe, owing us many billions already, would hardly come borrowing more, for a little while.

WILD CHEERING marks the triumph of wets in New York's Republican convention by a vote of 733 to 258. They demand repeal of the constitutional amendment, and nominate Mr. Tuttle, who demanded a repeal plank.

But "if a house be divided against itself," there is sure to be trouble.

The Republican house is divided against itself. The Democratic party in New York is solidly, harmoniously wet.

The Republican cheering may die away on election day.

GOOD TIMES or bad, the big A. T. & T., short for "American Telephone and Telegraph Company," continues building and spending money. In New York state alone, it has decided to spend $12,951,325 more this year, making total new construction for 1930, $80,689,760 for New York state alone.

It puts under the Harlem River one conduit, to carry 300,000 telephone wires, the conduit's units weighing 140,000 pounds each. Mr. Gifford, head of the big company, and Mr. McCullough, head of the New York company, evidently don't expect the world and the telephone business to come to an end.

ANOTHER SLUMP in Wall Street yesterday. Wheat and cotton were weak but not half as weak as some of the "best financial minds" that were able to tell you all about everything a year ago.

Then they would bore you for an hour explaining the "fundamental basis of American prosperity," and the importance of avoiding everything like wicked radical talk.

Now they "stand and gaze," wondering and asking: "What do you think; what do you hear?" Their wisdom on every conceivable subject has vanished, leaving a sediment of wondering anxiety.

A THOUSAND remedies are suggested for the depression. The real remedy would be COURAGE.

We have nothing to complain of in America, except that we have TOO MUCH of everything, from sugar to oil, cotton to wheat, coal to money.

You can borrow money on call at 1 per cent, buy sugar for 4 cents a pound, buy cotton for less than it cost to produce it, and wheat for a price that, "on the farm" does not pay the farmer for his labor.

We have everything that we had a year ago, except the courage of 1929, and that financial wisdom that melts in the heat of depression as little white mushrooms shrivel under the noonday sun.

A DISPATCH to the New York Times, announcing the automobile show in Paris, greatest of each year in Europe, says:

"American exhibitors, as usual, are allotted the worst place in the exhibition, inadequate space, etc."

The French undoubtedly feel that the power of America's automobile industry is sufficient to offset handicaps of that kind.

But why don't American companies rent a hall in Paris, and have an automobile exhibition of their own? They could afford it, and the French, doubtless, would admire their independence.

ETHEL BARRYMORE COLT, daughter of Ethel Barrymore, starting the ninth generation of actors in the family of Lanes, Drews and Barrymores, yesterday made her stage debut in Ohio, with her mother, who, of course, was the star of the play, called "Scarlet Sister Mary."

The talented young woman, wisely taking a small part, started her life work free of stage fright, as one of the ninth successive stage generation should do.

MR. SISSON, vice president of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, tells a Canadian audience that he expects a "prolonged increase in savings bank deposits."

A savings depositor is wise, if his deposit represents WISE economy.

He is extremely unwise when his deposits represent fear, and the foolish belief that "the world is coming to an end." The quickest way to change a more or less imaginary slump into a REAL AND DANGEROUS SLUMP is to stop spending money, hold your breath and wait.

FIND PLANE WRECKAGE; 2 MISSING

Engine Gone After Plunge Into Lake Erie; Ruins On Shore Near Conneaut

CONNEAUT, O., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—The wreckage of the plane in which Pilot Willard Parker and his passenger, William J. McNulty, Columbus (O.) salt manufacturer, disappeared early Wednesday, was found scattered along the Lake Erie shore line, three miles west of here, early today.

No bodies were found. The plane had fallen in the lake, and the wreckage had washed ashore.

2-DAY SEARCH ENDS

The wreckage was identified by manufacturers' numbers. It was discovered by W. D. Dimick, of Conneaut, after airplane pilots and others and searched for two days.

Parker and McNulty took off from Cleveland Municipal Airport at 1:30 a. m. Wednesday, saying they were going to Buffalo and to Mifflinburg, Pa.

They never reached either place.

ENGINE GONE

At the time of the take-off they had enough gasoline to last only about five hours. When no report of their landing was received, Cleveland and Columbus aviation officials began a search.

It was believed by relatives at first that McNulty had gone to Canada.

There was no indication in the wreckage of what caused the accident. The engine had dropped out of the craft.

Search was started immediately for the bodies of McNulty and Parker. Mayor Roy A. Pease, of Conneaut, took charge and ordered all available police to the scene.

F. S. WILLOCK, BANKER, DIES

Frank Scott Willock, of Academy avenue, Sewickley, Pittsburgh banker and paper manufacturer, died early today. He was the son of John S. and Josephine Hays Willock, and was born in Allegheny, May 30, 1868.

Mr. Willock was a graduate of Princeton, having graduated with the class of 1890. He married Lucy Christy, June 10, 1903. Until a few years ago Mr. Willock was a director of the Second National Bank here, and he was also the active head of the Tarentum Paper Company.

He was a member of several local clubs, among them the Allegheny Country Club and the Pittsburgh Club. His summer home was in Dark Harbor, Me.

Mr. Willock leaves his wife; two daughters, Miss Virginia and Miss Ruth Willock; a son, Roger Willock, all at home; a brother, W. W. Willock, of Syosset, L. I., and a sister, Miss Lillian Willock, of Sewickley.

Prince's Assailant Gets 5-Year Term

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Fernando de Rosa, 22-year-old Italian, today was found guilty of attempting to assassinate Humbert, Prince of Piedmont and Crown Prince of Italy, here last October, and was condemned to five years' imprisonment and to pay the costs of his trial.

Mrs. Hoover to Visit Girl Scout Sessions

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 27. —(AP.)—Mrs. Herbert Hoover, wife of President Hoover, will arrive in Indianapolis next Tuesday to attend the sixteenth annual convention of the National Council of Girl Scouts, according to information received by Mrs. E. Blake Francis, Girl Scout commissioner.

Mrs. Hoover, who is honorary president of the Girl Scouts of America, will visit Mrs. Harry G. Leslie, wife of the governor, while she is in this city.

LAKE GALE TOLL GROWS; 18 MISSING

2 Ships Wrecked, 2 Others Unheard From; Bodies Of Victims Recovered

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27. — Eighteen persons missing; the bodies of two drowned men washed ashore; two ships wrecked and one missing, was the known toll today of a cyclonic storm that swept over Lake icMhigan yesterday and carried death and destruction in its wake.

The barge Salvor foundered in Lake Michigan yesterday afternoon. Nine of the 14 members of the crew are accounted for. Two are dead and seven are in a Muskegon (Mich.) hospital.

FREIGHTER MISSING

North Shore, a small freighter, en route from St. Joseph, Mich., to Milwaukee, is missing. Aboard the craft were Capt. Irving Anderson, his wife, and the crew of four.

Our Son, the last windjammer on the Great Lakes, foundered off Sheyboygan, Wis., last night. Capt. Red Nelson, aged 73, and the crew of seven, were rescued by the steamer William Nelson.

Coastguard lifeboat from Ludington, Mich., at first reported missing, rode out the heavy storm, and with her prow crushed in, managed to make the harbor at Two Rivers, Wis., early today. Her crew of seven reported a desperate all-night struggle with the elements.

The Salvor, loaded with stone and in tow of the tug Fitzgerald, broke away from the tug during the storm and sank. Seven aboard the ship made shore alive. Two bodies were tossed up on the shores from the wreck. Meanwhile from Muskegon, Mich., came news that two men were taken from the wreckage of the Salvor by Coast Guards. Both men were believed to be alive.

SWEEPS OVER MICHIGAN

DETROIT, Sept. 27.—(INS.)—Michigan struggled today to recover from the effects of a near tornado which swept through it late yesterday. Several persons were injured and a conservative estimate placed the damage at from $300,000 to $500,000.

Police Seek Mother After Infant Dies

Several hours after a three-month-old girl baby was left at Presbyterian Hospital early today, the child died of spinal meningitis, hospital authorities informed North Side police. Police learned that Mrs. Jennie Mitchell of 905 Moravian way, had carried the sick child to the hospital for its mother, Mrs. Esther Schretfer, a neighbor, who was ill at her home. Police are seeking her address.

Ex-Refuel Champs Fail; Will Try Again

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Sept. 27.—(INS.)—A torn fuselage last night forced Loren Mendell and Pete Reinhart to end their second attempt to recapture the world's endurance flight record, after they had been in the air 27 hours. The fliers announced their intention of making a new start today.

VETERAN KILLS FATHER, 83, IN ROMANCE

Son Says Parent's Affair With Nurse Drove Him To Deed; Believed Insane

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—The love affair a war-warped son believed his aged father was carrying on with a nurse was blacked out by tragedy today.

The father, Rockwell Sayre, 83, president of a real estate concern, was dead, a bullet in the back, another in the chest.

The son, Sydney, who was thrice shot down in his plane during the World War, was held for the murder.

"I killed him," said the former second lieutenant of the Air Corps. "Here is my confession, written three days ago. And I intended, too, to kill the nurse (Miss Alma Zschaechner)."

NURSE SAVED

Police had arrived in time to prevent that. Sydney, 37, still was in the apartment office beside his father's body when officers, re-

SERIES OPENS WEDNESDAY

Associated Press.

By the simple process of continuing to win ball games, the St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs settled the first two places in the National League standing yesterday. The Cards clinched the title by defeating the Pirates, 10 to 5, and holding their lead of three games until there were only two left to play. The Cubs defeated Cincinnati, 7-5.

The Cardinals will uphold National League prestige in the world series with the Philadelphia Athletics, starting at Philadelphia Wednesday.

The first two games will be played in Philadelphia. After a day of rest and traveling, the teams will resume the series in St. Louis with games scheduled for October 3, 5 and 6. The other two games, if necessary, will be played in Philadelphia, October 8 and 9.

Mine War Flares In Kentucky Field

PROVIDENCE, Ky., Sept. 27.—(INS.)—Mine war again flared up in Webster County yesterday when a railroad bridge of the Providence Coal Mining Company was burned and a power line of the Kentucky Utilities Company was broken by a dynamite blast.

Gov. Sampson offered a $500 reward for the arrest and conviction of striking miners believed responsible for the sabbotage in the Providence mine district.

Boy's Hoop Shuts Off City's Power

DOVER, O., Sept. 27.—Five electricians worked two hours to repair damage done by a boy who threw a wire hoop over high tension wires of the municipal light plant. Power and light in one section of the city were cut off.

BOBBY GETS JUMP ON HOMANS

Atlantan, Battling for Sweep Of Championships, Gets Fine Start at Merion

BULLETIN.

MERION CRICKET CLUB, ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 27.—Bobby Jones was leading Gene Homans, 3 up, after nine holes of their 36-hole final round match in the national amateur golf tournament here today.

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service.

MERION CRICKET CLUB, ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 27.—With the greatest of all golfing honors awaiting him at the end of the long day, Bobby Jones, seeking a new record with his fourth championship golf title of the year, started the 36-hole final round this morning against Gene Homans, lone survivor of an original field of 170, for the national amateur golf championship.

Already he had won the amateur and open titles of England and the open championship of America. So he needed only to beat Homans today to attain the goal of his heart's desire—and Homans, good as he was, was not reputed to be good enough.

2,500 FANS SEE START

A high wind and a chill one greeted the occasion, but a gallery of 2,500 fans turned out for the start of the match, bundled in fur trimmed coats and sweaters.

Jones hit some practice shots with the wood before going to the first tee for the start. He wore a heavy sweater and so did Homans, making his debut as a finalist in any national championship.

BOBBY WINS FIRST HOLE

Jones drove with a spoon from the first tee, but was slightly in front of Homans' long shot. Bob pitched on 20 feet from the cup after Gene put his second in a trap. Homans came out of the

Frost Due Tonight In Low Districts

The first frost of the season, following a long period of torrid weather, may nip late vegetation and posies tonight. Forecaster W. S. Brotzman predicted temperatures between 38 and 45 tonight, with possibility of frost in low-lying sections.

Wallace, Ex-Envoy Ill at Paris Home

PARIS, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Hugh C. Wallace, who was ambassador to France during the latter part of President Wilson's last administration, is critically ill from bronchitis at his home in Paris.

The former ambassador's American home is in Tacoma, Wash.

PANTAGES WINS NEW TRIAL

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Alexander Pantages, elderly theater magnate, convicted of attacking Eunice Pringle, 17-year-old dancer, has another opportunity to attempt to prove himself innocent.

In an opinion yesterday the state Appellate Court ordered a new trial, reversing his conviction. The court held that four principal errors occurred in the trial which resulted in Pantages' conviction last October and his subsequent sentence to from one to 50 years in prison.

Pantages, at liberty under $100,000 bail pending outcome of his appeal, said:

"I don't suppose anyone in the world knows how happy I am."

Miss Pringle said:

"Of couse, I am surprised, but I have nothing to say just now. My attorney informed me of the decision, but I have heard nothing of plans for a new trial."

Her attorney said Miss Pringle's $1,000,000 damage suit against Pantages would not be affected.

FIRST GRIDIRON VICTIM DIES

Charles Carnes, 15, of Monessen, died last night in the McKeesport Hospital, the first football victim of the 1930 season in the Pittsburgh district. A report to the coroner gave the cause of death as septicemia resulting from a broken leg, September 18, in a practice game at the Monessen High School.

The boy's father, Roy Carnes, told a deputy coroner a school physician attended Charles at the time of the accident, but that he grew worse and was removed to the hospital Wednesday.

Maurice Falk and Bride Sail on Honeymoon

Maurice Falk, 63, of Hotel Schenley, capitalist and philanthropist, and Mrs. Salam K. Wertheimer, 62, also of Pittsburgh, were sailing on the steamship Augustus today for two months' honeymoon, following their secret marriage in Cleveland, according to messages received here.

The ceremony took place at the home of Mrs. Wertheimer's daughter, Mrs. Albert E. Einstein.

The newlyweds will take a honeymoon trip through Europe before returning to reside in Hotel Schenley, it was said.

Falk is a native of Pittsburgh, and has been active in the development of many industrial and charitable enterprises here. He and his brother, the late Leon Falk, Sr., were co-donors of the Falk Medical Clinic to the University of Pittsburgh.

Recently he created the Maurice and Laura Falk Foundation, a philanthropic trust fund, in memory of his late wife, Mrs. Laura Falk.

Mrs. Wertheimer was the widow of Morris Wertheimer, who died two years ago. He had been associated with the firm of A. Guggenheimer, distillers. She also made her home in Hotel Schenley.

Friends of the couple admitted they had heard rumors to the effect that the couple intended to be married, but the news of the fact that they have started on their honeymoon came as a surprise.

Clocks Go Back Tonight, Daylight Time Ends

Tomorrow at 2 o'clock a. m. daylight saving time, which has been in effect in Pittsburgh and many other sections of the nation since the last Sunday in April, will end officially, and clocks will be turned back one hour to Eastern Standard time.

For most persons the end comes tonight when the time pieces will be turned back an hour or ahead 11 hours, and the populace will gain an hour's extra rest.

Railroads which moved their local schedules forward to conform to daylight time will revert to standard time.

The courts and other official offices, which failed to turn their clocks ahead in April, but met an hour earlier to get on the saving basis, will open at the hour set as the legal time.

DIRECTORATE LOOMS FOR GERMANY IN HITLER CRISIS

HINDENBURG AIDE TO TRY COALITION

Bruening Unmoved by Fascist Threat, Seeks to Win Tax Reforms With Socialists

Universal Service

BERLIN, Sept. 27.—A directorate dictatorship by a strong cabinet — looms today across the German political arena.

Such is the speculative answer to the question: Which way will the government turn in view of the irreconcilable Fascist ambitions pontificated by Adolf Hitler at the Leipsig trial Thursday.

It is not admitted that the national Socialist leader's testimony that the Fascists, when they attain a Reichstag majority, will ignore the Treaty of Versailles and its consequent burdens and seek to overthrow the government established by the revolution of 1918 has in any way changed the intentions of Chancellor Heinrich Bruening and his Center party cabinet, now nominally in power.

PUSHES REFORMS

Meanwhile the chancellor, it is understood, will endeavor to win legislative approval for President Paul von Hindenburg's emergency tax reforms by exerting pressure on the Social Democrats (Socialists), the strongest party in the new Reichstag.

Should all these compromises fail in pushing through the Reichstag Hindenburg's much-needed reforms, a directorate would be the government's only alternative.

The new program of the German government headed by Chancellor Bruening was to be announced today.

Special significance is attached to the forthcoming statement of governmental policy in that it may to a great extent offset the tide of Fascism.

PLANS UNKNOWN

While details on Bruening's reform measures remained unknown, it was generally understood that the key point of his program concerned the financial situation facing the nation. Huge cuts in employment doles, reduction of salaries and wages through trade union agreements and increase in certain kinds of taxes will form the main part of the new policy, according to authentic information.

While Bruening probably would compromise with the Fascists and allow them a voice in the government as a last resort, he was believed more determined to exhaust all efforts to bring about a dominating coalition based on the powerful Socialist Party in order to carry the bulk of his reform program before the Reichstag next week. This also involves sacrifices and concessions to all coalition elements.

In some official quarters it was felt that Hitler, in his Leipsig speech, practically rendered his chance for participation in Germany's government hopeless, as his appearance in office would probably be viewed with disfavor by foreign governments.

Influential Cuban Bank Closes Door

HAVANA, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—The Banco del Comercio, one of the oldest and most influential financial institutions in Cuba, suspended payments today after an all-night meeting of its directors. The two vice presidents, F. Beiglie and L. Lopez, who have been acting in charge since resignation last week of Porfirio Franca, president, in a statement issued after the meeting, said it was necessary for the institution to suspend operation "provisionally." No reasons were assigned for the failure. The government used it as a depository for payroll purposes.

HEMPHILL HERE HITS PINCHOT

John Hemphill, gubernatorial nominee of the Democratic and Liberal parties, ended a day of campaigning in Pittsburgh with an address late yesterday to Democratic workers in Magee Building headquarters, 334 Fourth avenue. David L. Lawrence, Democratic county chairman, presided.

Lawrence predicted the Democrats would be victorious at the election November 4 because the "Republicans have a nominee for governor they do not want," whereas the Democrats have popular nominees running on an anti-dry platform.

Hemphill attacked Pinchot's proposal to make the coal and iron police employes of the state, to be paid by the companies they served instead of by the taxpayers.

In contrast to Pinchot's proposal, the Democratic platform has declared for the abolition of the coal and iron police, Hemphill averred.

Indian Police Shoot 46 in Row at Polls

NAINT TAL, United Provinces, India, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—One person was killed and 45 wounded by police rifles here today when police tried to suppress a demonstration of Nationalists. Several policemen also were injured. An election for a local Moslem council was being held, and the town hall, which was the polling station, was picketed by representatives of All-India National Congress.

TRAP SUSPECT IN BUILDING

Trapped in the building at 626 Penn avenue after breaking into the E. Rosenthal Fur Company, Steve Aiello, 18, of 1818 Cliff street, was arrested early today by police who searched the various rooms in the place for more than an hour, according to Lieut. Frank Shunk.

Aiello was cornered in the Duquesne Floral Company office on the third floor, police said, and later admitted removing a pane of glass from a rear window, through which he made his entrance.

Aiello said he wanted to get a fur piece for his mother, according to police.

PREPARE DRIVE FOR TUTTLE

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—The Republican party of the state was preparing today to make the highroads and byroads ring with stories of Democratic corruption in its campaign to elect Charles H. Tuttle governor.

That the traditionally dry party was fighting for a man opposed to prohibition and that it had pledged itself in convention to seek repeal of the nation's dry law, was expected to matter little as the party chiefs believed they had taken the prohibition issue out of the campaign by taking almost the same stand on the question the Democrats have taken.

Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who will be nominated for another term by the Democrats, has come out for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

The Democratic convention will open Monday at Syracuse.

Republican leaders professed not to be worried by defections. Independent drys announced soon after the Republican convention adjourned yesterday that they would put a third ticket in the field. Who their gubernatorial candidate would be was not determined.

ECKENER FLIES IN DO-X TEST

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Sept. 27.—Dr. Hugo Eckener, famous commander of the Graf Zeppelin and champion of lighter-than-air craft, today experienced his first flight in the giant Dornier DO-X.

With Chief Test Pilot Richard Wagner at the controls and Dr. Claude Dornier, Capt. Christian Christiansen, Technical Director Berner, Lieut. Schildhauer and Harvey Brewster, an American engineer, aboard, the 12-engined DO-X began its final series of trial flights which will definitely determine, within the next few days, whether and when the projected trans-Atlantic flight to New York will be undertaken.

Dr. Eckener said:

"I enjoyed the flight very much. I am greatly impressed by the smoothness of flight, the absence of vibration and the surprising by small amount of motor roar noticeable on the passenger deck."

The DO-X was in the air two hours. A flight of five hours is planned for tomorrow. Dr. Dornier has invited Henry Ford, who is in Munich, but it is not yet known whether he will come through Friedrichshafen on his way to Cologne.

CRATER'S GIFTS TO DIVORCEE REVEALED

Woman Emerges From Hiding To Tell of Friendship With Missing Jurist

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Mrs. Connie Marcus, Fifth avenue saleswoman, has emerged from hiding to tell authorities of her friendship with Joseph Force Crater, missing Supreme Court justice, but the recital furnished no clues to the whereabouts of the missing jurist.

Mrs. Marcus, a divoreee, disappeared September 13, at the time public search was begun for Crater.

The told Police Commissioner Mulrooney and Assistant District Attorney Albert Unger yesterday that she went away to avoid any "embarrassment and humiliation" in connection with Justice Crater's disappearance, but had returned upon the advice of friends.

She said she had known Justice Crater for six or seven years and had seen him three or four times a month. He gave her gifts of money, she said, amounting to from $90 to $100 a month.

The last time she saw him, she said, was July 24, when they attended a theater performance together. She heard from him August 3, she said, when he sent her $100 from his summer home at Belgrade Lakes, Me.

She said Justice Crater told her of plans for a vacation at his summer home and said he expected to return to New York about August 27.

Mrs. Marcus said she met Justice Crater when she went to him to see about obtaining a divorce. Her husband now is in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga.

2 AUTO VICTIMS DIE, 14 HURT IN CRASHES

Canadian's Car Kills Bellevue Lad; Shock of Accident Proves Fatal to Woman

A boy and a woman were dead from injuries received in auto accidents, a man was critically hurt as the result of a street car accident, and 14 other persons were recovering from injuries suffered in motor crashes, according to police reports here today.

The boy, Ray Yolkwein, 6, of R. D. No. 7, Pine Creek road, Bellevue, was struck by an automobile near his home. B. J. Thaill, of 1523 Church street, Windsor, Canada, was driver of the machine.

DIES OF SHOCK

The woman, Mrs. Jennie Smith, 80, of 3822 Liberty avenue, died in the West Penn Hospital of pneumonia and shock from injuries suffered Monday when she was struck by an automobile at Thirty-ninth street and Liberty avenue. S. J. Weiss of 7311 Idlewild street, driver of the machine, was notified to report to the coroner.

Herman Hasent, 36, of 227 Atwood street, is in the Montefiore Hospital, in a critical condition, as the result of having been run over by a street car in front of 2518 Fifth avenue, according to a police report.

Mrs. Ray Cooper, 45, of Morrowfield Apartments, Murray avenue, is in the Homeopathic Hospital with a probable skull fracture and internal injuries, received when struck by an automobile in Sixth avenue near Wood street.

SAFETY ZONE CRASH

Lester Luckie, 40, of 6201 Fifth avenue, is in the Homeopathic Hospital with minor injuries as the result of a collision between the machine of C. K. Hubbard, 34, of 6201 Fifth avenue, with whom he was riding, and that of P. V. Shoe, 36, of 632 Grant street, at Bigelow boulevard and Grant street.

Victor Viard, 16, of Glenshaw; Robert Bender, 16, of 829 Long avenue, Millvale; Dolores Griffith, 15, of 642 North avenue, Millvale; Mary O. Baier, 16, of 304 North avenue, Millvale, and Anna Missle, 15, of 1430 Greenfield avenue, Millvale, were injured when their automobile struck a safety zone in West Liberty avenue, near Capital avenue, and upset.

Mrs. Margaret Drescher, 60, Bertha Schultz, 11; Louise Heim, 21, and Bertha Heim, 38, all of 3141 Brighton road, were injured when a auto driven by C. . Drescher, 60, collided with a machine operated, police say, by Edward Tonn, 33, of 233 Manhattan street, Etna.

Mrs. Anna Mannin, 47, of 1721 Irwin avenue, and Margaret Conlon, 38, of Carnegie, riding with Tonn, were also hurt. Both drivers were arrested for reckless driving, police said.

Tear Gas Aids Raid On Wheeling Cafe

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Raiders who failed to batter down the heavy doors of the Cafe of the Allies here, reached their objective by dropping tear gas bombs down a ventilator shaft.

The place, described as one of the most elaborately equipped establishments in this district, was wrecked by the officers. Seven men were arrested, among them Roland Ringer, who was said to have purchased the cafe yesterday.

Taxicab Racket Charged to Ohio Constables

STEUBENVILLE, O., Sept. 27.—Jefferson County constables have been operating a taxi system whereby they hired autos from each other at rates ranging from $5 to $45 and charged this sum to prisoners for transportation from their homes to justice courts, according to charges made in a state examiner's report filed here. It was charged that more than $5,000 had thus been paid in illegal fees. The report urged county officials to stop the practice.

tion off the state road, 17 miles from here.

With the finding of Conto's body authorities directed their attention to his estranged wife, Jennie, 38, and Constable Raper, companion of Conto, who last saw him alive.

LAST SAW HIM

When Conto was reported missing, Raper informed authorities that he had taken Conto to a corner in the business section of Leechburg to meet two friends who were "looking for him." Raper said he then left him.

Police said they have learned that Raper lost money in the stock market crash and received funds from Conto to meet his losses.

They also learned that he visited the Conto home at intervals where he and Conto held numerous conversations.

Police also recalled, they said, that Raper informed them some time ago that Conto had been marked for death.

AGREE TO SEPARATE

The Contos have been married 16 years and have three children, Margaret, 14; Mulvana, 10, and Bart, 8. Six months ago husband and wife agreed their love had cooled and mutually consented to a separation, police say.

sponding to an alarm turned in by neighbors, reached the place.

Miss Zachaechner had been nurse for Rockwell Sayre's wife for eight years, she said. Mrs. Sayres is an invalid.

Sidney Sayre, a University of Chicago graduate, who told police he was an inventor by occupation described the reasons for his act:

TELLS OF "GIFTS"

"My father was making love to her," he said. "He was presenting gifts to her—handkerchiefs and perfume. Had he given her money I would not have cared. This world is pretty loose today, anyway. But father was of the old school, and ought to have known better. Handkerchiefs and perfume are not proper gifts for a man of the old school."

There was no quarrel before the shooting.

"I shot him first in the back," he told his questioners, "and then in the chest to end his suffering."

SANITY QUESTIONED

Friends estimated Rockwell Sayre's wealth at a million dollars. There are two other sons—Paul, a professor at the University of Iowa, and Joseph, a post-graduate student at Harvard.

Sydney Sayre has been receiving a government pension on account of his war injuries. Police were inclined to question his sanity.

Sayre said that as an inventor he had been specializing in the perfection of collapsible rubber lifeboats. The nurse related that recently he had spoken of working on a noiseless pistol.

Tallulah Bankhead To Act in U. S. Films

LONDON, Sept. 27.—(INS.)—Tallulah Bankhead, famed English stage star, announced today she had accepted an offer to go to Hollywood to appear in talking pictures. She will leave London as soon as her present engagement in the play "Let Us Be Gay" is ended.

She probably will remain in Hollywood three years.

"The offer was so dazzling it would have been ridiculous to refuse it," she said.

Hammer, N. C. House Member, Dies at 66

ASHBORO, N. C., Sept. 27.—(INS.)—Representative William C. Hammer, 66, member of Congress for 16 years, died here following a short illness which last week interrupted his campaign for re-election. He was the second member of the North Carolina delegation in the Lower House to die within a week. Representative Charles M. Stedman died in Washington Monday.

Drilling in Africa, Sinclair Reveals

PARIS, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Harry Sinclair, American oil man, arriving here told interviewers that his engineers had been drilling for eight years on a 40,000,000-acre lease in Portuguese West Africa. He would not say whether they had found any oil, but said seepings in the sand bordering the area had been burning for years.

RUSS GRAIN SELLING BANNED

Chicago Board Transmits News of Action to Hyde; May Forbid Foreign Trade

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—A sturdy stockade was thrown up today by the Chicago Board of Trade to protect weakening American wheat values against Russian bear raids.

In a resolution, unprecented in the board's 60-year history, its directors yesterday branded the selling of wheat futures by any foreign government a "new development of commerce of seriously objectionable character," and decreed "it must be brought to an end."

"TO PROTECT FARMER"

The action, announced in a telegram to Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, whose charges of short selling by Soviet Russia initiated an investigation by the board, included a new injunction to put an end to bear raids and price manipulation.

In his message to Secretary Hyde, President John A. Bunnell, of the board, expressed appreciation of the information of Soviet market operations furnished the board's business-conduct committee, which met with the secretaries of agriculture and commerce, at Washington, and pledged "every co-operation in protection of the American farmer in the free grain markets."

PLAN BAN RULE

The ban against short selling by foreign governments was adopted yesterday after the committee had returned from Washington and conferred with the directorate.

The business conduct committee, which resumed its inquiry of Russian sales yesterday, was expected to draft plans for detecting any operations of foreign governments and probably a rule forbidding board members from handling such transactions.

BLOND'S APPEAL LISTED HERE

The appeals of Irene Schroeder, blond "trigger woman," and her sweetheart, W. Glenn Dague, from their conviction and death sentence in Lawrence County for the murder of Corp. Brady Paul, state highway patrolman, are listed to be heard by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court during its Pittsburgh session convening Monday.

The appeal of former Judge Henry G. Wasson from the recommendation of his disbarment by the board of governance of the Pennsylvania Bar Association, growing out of charges in connection with his handling of the estate of Eleanor Davidson, is also listed.

Both cases are listed to be heard during the second week of the session. The list includes 92 appeals from 17 Western Pennsylvania counties.

Greeks' Role in History Extolled by Coolidge

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Sept. 27.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The Greek people are celebrating the completion of a century of independence. One hundred years ago they were relieved of Asiatic domination and enabled to resume their rightful place as a European nation. The interest of the United States in their struggle for freedom was manifested by a great speech in the House of Representatives by Daniel Webster.

Calvin Coolidge

The whole of western civilization will join in the spirit of this celebration because of the vast influence of ancient Greece upon our modern life. From that source we drew our conception of liberty. In art the Greeks have never been surpassed. They remain supreme in architecture, sculpture and literature. After all the centuries their names lead in poetry, oratory and philosophy. Even the science of today exists because their philosophers taught men how to use their minds. Down through the ages liberal culture has had for its foundation a study of Greek thought. This little nation, nurtured by the mountains and the sea, revealed the proper relations of man to man. Because of the intellectual service they have rendered, the world will rejoice in the revival and prosperity of the Greeks.

'BAERING' DOWN ON THE NEWS WITH ARTHUR BUGS BAER

Daylight saving time is over tonight in America and Canada after having added an extra hour of twilight to a Republican administration.

Daylight saving didn't save the farmers, the brokers or the Chicago Cubs.

An extra hour of twilight isn't much after we voted for four years of it.

The idea of the whole thing was to get us up bright and early. We got up early. But not bright.

It was supposed to give us more time in the open air with the flowers, the sunshine and the bees. But who wants another 60 minutes with the bees?

It made the nights shorter and the daze longer. The hot sun can always spot a golfer a stroke a hole.

Fresh air puzzles us because it's the only public utility that isn't listed on the Exchange.

We're glad to go back to railroad time because we understand anything we have to buy a ticket for.

And when we add an hour to the darkness it gives us more time for the good old-fashioned home life with the wife and children on those Tom Thumb links.

Betrothals of the week-end are most exciting. And two of them concern popular members of the younger set.

First comes the announcement from the J. King Scotts, of Devon road, of the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth Lupton Scott, to George Reily Bailey, son of the Edward Baileys, of Harrisburg.

Pilght Troth

And Mrs. Charles Wiley Davis, of Woodland road, Sewickley, makes known the engagement of her daughter, Janet Walker Davis, to Francis Graham Hollister, son of the Harold A. Hollisters, of Santa Barbara, Cal. Mrs. Davis and her daughters, Janet and Amelia, will leave early in the Yuletide month for California, where they'll stay during the remainder of the winter.

During the coming week there'll be entertainments for an early October bride to add still more attraction to the fall season. As you've guessed, the etertainment will be for Forsyth Patterson, daughter of the Charles F. Pattersons, who'll become the bride of George Elder Watson, Jr., son of the George Elder Watsons, of New York, on Saturday at "Hillsborough," the Patterson Sewickley place.

Mrs. Ledlie W. Young will give a luncheon in her home on Monday, and on Friday Genevieve Bell will entertain with a luncheon at Oak Vale, Pa., where the Bells have a summer place, and Friday afternoon Mrs. H. R. Freeman will give a tea in her home. That evening Charles L. Patterson, brother of the bride-to-be, will give the rehearsal dinner in the Allegheny Country Club.

PLEATS ARE INTRODUCED INTO THE EVENING MODE

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Sept. 27.—The pleat is in—very much in—most of the smart dresses and after a long absence is even being permitted to enjoy night life. We are pleased that the pleat has tion, for most of us are tired of wearing and looking at skirts that had no room for pleats or any other kind of treatment in their scant dimensions. And so it is nice that we can now take our choice of the pleated or unpleated long full skirt.

With the advent of pleats in various details on daytime frocks has come a great demand for evening dresses with skirts that are in part pleated. Such skirts are a change from the godets that ruled last season. The fondness for dresses of sheer materials for this autumn has added impetus to the success of the skirt with a pleated treatment and so we see it everywhere. For women are reluctant to abandon the evening frock of chiffon or georgette and such frocks with their slim lines simply demand pleats in order to enhance the lovely line of the sheer gown which invariably has clinging characteristics.

SLIM princess lines are much liked for coats, most of us being well able to dispense with the full wrap that used to be so much liked. Those of us who are naturally slender and those of us who have worked hard to shed avoirdupois wish of course to emphasize our svelte lines and so we hand coats that will assist our demand. Therefore the coat cloth cut on slim lines will be to the fore more than ever this fall and it looks like becoming a permanent affair.

THOSE WHO ARE PLANING to wear a chiffon evening frock this winter should study in detail the sketch of the charmingly youthful Molyneux model here shown. It is Empire green chiffon and is a triumph for the use of pleats which are to be found on both skirt and bodice. The fine pleats are simply pressed—not stitched. Little flat appliqued borders of the same material edge the decolletage and add a demure but distinct charm to the frock. A belt of chiffon and strass embroidery fastens in front and is laced at a definitely higher waistline. The skirt is even all around and clears the instep.

THE SAME DESIGNER is responsible for the smart coat. It is a slim, becoming affair in dull black with a deep yoke of shaved black galyak which closely imitates broadtail. The sleeves flare somewhat below the elbow. The wide shawl collar reaches quite to the waistline in front. This is the type of coat that will be seen in the best places here right through the season.

Here's Proof

That Women Who Know Their Fashions Are Shopping at

BOGGS & BUHL

¶ The sales in Boggs & Buhl's departments of Women's and Misses' Dresses, Women's and Misses' Coats, and Women's and Misses' Fur Coats during the last month exceeded the sales for the same departments last year by fifty-one and one-tenth percent (51.1%). A comparison of this figure with the average figures of the Pittsburgh Metropolitan district, as shown in the Federal Reserve report, makes it quite apparent that this increase at Boggs & Buhl is far, far larger than that enjoyed by the Pittsburgh District.

¶ Boggs & Buhl have announced that the women who know their fashions are shopping here. A fashion show conducted here last week was crowded to capacity. These figures on our last month's sales are another dramatic proof that the women who know their fashions are shopping at Boggs & Buhl.

¶ What is it that makes women who know their fashions shop increasingly at Boggs & Buhl? The answer is simple.

We Keep Our Eyes On Our Customers

¶ They have made it plain that they want good fashions. Consequently, within the past year Boggs & Buhl have increased their fashion buying facilities by enlisting the country's most reliable sources of fashion information. The best fashionists in the country are working for Boggs & Buhl.

¶ Every piece of fashion merchandise which appears in this store is here only because it is an authoritative version of an actual fashion which is being accepted by smart American women.

¶ Not only so, but at Boggs & Buhl we buy only dresses that go fashionably with our coats. And accessories that go fashionably with our fashionable costumes. This is one store where you can choose a costume complete—with each part of the costume not only fashionable, but harmonious, as the present mode demands.

Pittsburgh Women Shoppers Are Shrewd Shoppers

¶ And it is not to be wondered at that these Pittsburgh women who know their fashions are shopping at Boggs & Buhl, where really good fashions are so moderately priced.

In the memories of such veteran sportsmen as Edward Treser of Homewood the old Homewood Driving Park occupies a vivid position. Homewood today has no sport attraction of particular interest to everybody but 30 years ago its track was one of the places to go to. We have a program of the Grand Inaugural Circuit Meeting of July, 1893. The cover presents a portrait of J. A. McCracken, secretary and treasurer of the meeting, and recognizes Thomas B. Kerr as the president and William Van Osten as the starter.

The races in those days were harness races and among the drivers on July 11, 1893 was your old friend Pop Geers. Pop won a heat with Pansy in the first race, but in the second he was completely out of the money with Merry Chimes and he did no better in the third with Electric Chimes.

On the same day G. N. Sanders was driving Sidney Boy for the Cloverdale Stock Farm. A. Colmar Pa., and J. M. Kay, of Sewickley, was back of a winner out of his own stable. Pittsburgh Wilkes was running for the Chautauqua Lake Stock Farm stable and C. E. Turner of Ambler, Pa., was handling Dudley Olcott.

It was on July 13, 1881 that Maud S. famed trotter, broke the world's record for the mile trot by running that distance in 2:10½.

But perhaps you'd be more interested in the ads. Newell's (open day and night) had the choice position on page two, exploiting the tavern at 99 Fifth avenue. The keynote of the Newell appeal was a poem, touchingly entitled "After the Races Are Over."

"After the races are over, after the crowd has flown
Then you feel thirsty and weary—aching in every bone.
Quickly you flee to the city, ask for the crack cafe.
Every one shouts 'Go to Newell's' that is the best place to stay."

Further indication of what occupied the race-goers after the races is furnished by the character of the other ads. The Iron City Brewing Company (Beer, Ale and Porter) boasted capacity of 250,000 barrels and the Fifth Avenue Hotel, under the management of Charles F. Kornman and the ownership of A. I. Walter at 8 and 10 Masters way, boasted "a well-stocked bar" for "first class ladies and gents."

Just one line more. Joseph Fleming & Son at 412 Market street, solicited mail and express orders for pure rye whisky. Price $1 (one dollar) per quart. Six quarts $5.

Hard Work on Picture Keeps King Vidor From Another

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 27.

Tired out by his strenuous schedule on "Billy the Kid," King Vidor, Metro Goldwyn Mayer director, plans to take a three months' rest from film activities.

The chances are that Clive Brook will not play in Ann Harding's next picture for Pathe. In the final version of the script of "The Greater Love" Brook's character has been made into a heavy.

If Clive is willing to continue the studio will be delighted but heavies are not in his line. As the script now stands, the hero will be played by Harry Bannister who is Ann Harding's husband in fact, as well as in the story.

'LEATHERNECKING' FUN ON SHERIDAN SCREEN

By BARBARA WILBERT

"Leathernecking," taken from the stage production "Present Arms," presented as the Sheridan Square screen feature, is a rollicking, bungling collection of laughs. Ken Murray is a cockney boy who impersonates an officer to win the love of an English girl of high rank and is forced to pay the consequences. It all happens in and about the American barracks in Honolulu.

We are shown some real action but Benny Rubin and the rest of the Marines won't let us take it too seriously. The "boys" stage a song and dance number, "When Cindy Goes to the Ball" that no one could resist. When a certain flapper from the South stops talking long enough to gasp for breath we discover that she is Louise Fazenda.

You will undoubtedly be surprised, at the conclusion of the picture, to see a ballet of pretty girls "go into their dance" on a supposedly deserted island. If you enjoy soldiers at leisure, their hard-boiled hilarity, pretty girls tap dancing and snappy tunes, you'll like "Leathernecking."

DANCER, RUSS STAR IN NEW STAGE FARE

Bill Robinson, who has been scoring in vaudeville and musical comedy for more than 30 years, stepping the most intricate steps, comes to the Nixon opening Monday night. He co-stars with Adelaide Hall in a new musical comedy, "Brown Buddies." Bill is a "dancing hound whose feet are absolutely crazy."

"Candle Light," the comedy coming to the Shubert-Alvin next week with matinees Wednesday and Saturday, will introduce a young Russian actress, Eugenie Leontovich, to Pittsburgh. She played as Mrs. Pepys in "And So to Bed" in New York last season and subsequently appeared in "Fires of Spring."

The George Sharp Players in the Pitt will present their first mystery comedy-drama of the season Monday night when they open a week's playing of "The Wasps' Nest," which is said to have good parts for Jan Maxy and Paul McGrath and other members of the company.

Step On It is the Academy's new burlesque attraction. It will open with a Sunday midnight show.

COURTROOM DRAMA REMAINS IN WARNER

"Scarlet Pages" opened a second week on the Warner screen yesterday. It is a courtroom drama that centers in a cabaret girl who finds herself on trial for murder and who is defended by a woman attorney. Elsie Ferguson, Marian Nixon, John Halliday and Grant Withers are in the cast.

New Bus Service To Start Monday

A new bus service between Pittsburgh and New Castle will be inaugurated Monday by the Harmony Short Line Motor Transportation Company, through Zelienople and Ellwood City. The trip, 13 miles shorter than via Butler, will require two hours.

According to David I. McCahill, president, four round trips will be made each day, providing close connections with other coach lines in New Castle.

WESLEY EDDY WELCOME WARMS HIS HEART AT THE PENN

By GEORGE SEIBEL

WESLEY EDDY, Pittsburgh's favorite master of ceremonies, is the feature of the show at the Penn Theater this week, competing successfully with Gloria Swanson in her new screen comedy, "What a Widow." The audiences welcomed Wesley with warm enthusiasm in his guise of a Rube and later as a Dude. They acclaimed his imitation of Maurice Chevalier, they doted on his singing of "O Sole Mio," and they were enraptured by his art of getting melody out of a saw.

George Seibel

It was a most amusing stage show from first to last. But there was an adagio dancer named Geraldine who furnished the most amazing feature—an acrobatic dance that displayed the sinuous grace of a serpent.

MIDGETS ALSO FINE

Then there were the Midgets, whom Sylvester picks up, twists around and leaves in all sorts of attitudes as comical as unexpected. With the Crackerjacks, a crew of singing-dancing-tumbling eccentrics, they gave the revue its pep, while the Chester Hale Girls furnished the grace.

As to David Pesetzki and Wild Oscar, it is only necessary to say they were there. The classical music and sentimental songs were enjoyed as hugely as ever.

"WHAT A WIDOW"

Gloria Swanson's new screen comedy shows glorious Gloria in all sorts of gowns for all seasons and all hours of the day. It also shows her being pursued by all sorts of males into all sorts of places. And it also permits her to sing some new Vincent Youmans songs with romantic cadenzas.

"What a Widow" tells almost the whole story in the title. There are scenes aboard the "Isle de France," scenes in a continental railway train, and all sorts of drinks as well as all sorts of drunks. There were many titters and some guffaws from the audience, and no doubt hundreds of feminine hearts were envious of glorious Gloria's gorgeous gowns.

LONE WOLF ISN'T LONESOME IN ENRIGHT

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Bert Lytell has brought the Lone Wolf to our town again. This time it is the picture "The Last of the Lone Wolf," which opened yesterday in the Enright.

The film puts the Lone Wolf into a mythical kingdom atmosphere. But it doesn't keep him lonesome. Patsy Ruth Miller is there for company and he and she goes into the big clinch at the finale. The plot has to do with a ring, a queen and a throne.

Mr. Lytell has an active time of it. He jumps from cliffs, tosses people off fast moving trains and engages in a number of fist fights. And there's no holding him. The king's soldiers and the king's police chase him all about. But, like the traditional elusive fox, he is always a few jumps ahead.

Dick Powell, smiling and in a new dark brown suit, is presenting "Step Lively and Stay Alive" on the stage. The show demonstrates once again that Mr. Powell's popularity is of a durable quality. A number of featured entertainers are present, including Wally Vernon, who also is a master of ceremonies.

Milton Slosser is at the console organ with some more organ tunes and vocal numbers.

Girl Hurt by Truck Sues Dairy Company

For injuries alleged to have been caused by a truck backing into a roadside refreshment stand where she was working, Violet Doumont, 20, of New Kensington, asked $75,000 damages from the Liberty Dairy Products Company in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court.

The mishap occurred at Kleiber's Beach, near New Kensington, June 24.

Example

No doubt a second love will come some day,
And I will tilt with romance once again.
But I will be an actor in a play,
An actor quite immune to grief and pain.

You stripped me clean of all sincerity,
And left a youthful cynic in my place.
When lads are forced to pay the fiddler's fee,
The price is quite apparent in their face.

So Love may come whenever she may care,
I'm more than ready for her, thanks to you;
Of course it's rather cruel to be aware
That I may break a trusting heart in two.

Still, sport like that to you seemed rather gay—
And, after all, dear, turnabout's fair play!

—Young Man of Manhattan.

Ma-Ma!

"Dear Walter," writes one of the loyal pals, Ned E. Williams, of the Paramount Publix Corp. "I visited Detroit last week and believe you have basis for action against the newspaper there, the Times, which uses your stuff. All over the town I was confronted with billboards containing 24 sheets (in colors) to exploit your column. Your countenance (my what?) fills one-third of this space, and that's where your squawk comes in. In the first place, you are wearing a green hat and a red necktie, neither of which I ever saw on the original. And worse, the lobes of your ears are ROUGED!! Did I scream?"

Miss Cambridge. Reach in the second drawer of that desk and bring me my carbolic acid.

No. 11352

And "Fog" Garner, of Park Row, suggests this nickname for Broadway:

"The Gape White Way."

Add Austin Car Gags

James A. Maley's: "They are painting them yellow so they can sell 'em in bunches like bananas." . . . J. C. K.'s: "Do you know that your car was not on the road? It was off all wheels at once!" Austin driver: "Well, what of it? Can't a feller hiccup if he has to?"

Now, There!

"You say you do not dislike Rudy Vallee," writes one of his admirers, "that you never said you disliked him; that you dislike people who dislike your publishing jokes about him. Well, why print jokes about him? After all, there's only one Rudy Vallee!"

Thank God.

Are They That Low?

Richy Craig, Jr., was walking along Broadway yesterday displaying a swollen finger.

"Gosh," said a sympathizer, "how did you get that?"

"I was shaking hands with a booking agent," replied the caustic Craig, "and somebody accidentally stepped on it."

By Way of Report

Pat J. McCaffrey is interested in the fact that if you have two O's in your handle you have a sound chance of becoming a Hoover, a Coolidge, a Roosevelt or a Woodrow Wilson. He points out that the prize-ring heroes had to use the double vowel or consonant to achieve fame. They include, says Mr. McCaffrey, John L. Sullivan, James J. Corbett, Robert Fitzsimmons, James J. Jeffries, William Harrison (Jack) Dempsey, James J. Tunney and Jess Willard. Jack Johnson is the one great exception, says McCaffrey, who adds that the letter "J" appears at least once. Of course, there are Benny Leonard, Rudy Vallee, Percy Hammond and Mark Hellinger.

One wonders how Mr. McCaffery explains the success of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, who hasn't a double vowel or consonant—not even a "J"!

The Morning Mail

"Dear Walter," writes Arnold Burnett. "These days we have miniature dollar bills, miniature automobiles, miniature movies, miniature golf courses, miniature typewriters and miniature salaries!"

Who, me?

Overheard

"Is she fast?"

"She's faster than the speed of a Broadway lie!"

A Form of Criticism?

The popular Clem McCarthy, a local sports scrivener, is not the sort of lad who, when you say to him "How do you feel?" replies: "Fine, and you?" McCarthy has a different answer which wins him many friends. Perhaps it is another form of flattery, nevertheless it registers.

The other fight night some one asked him:

"How do you feel, Clem?"

"As good as you look!" was his snapper.

Jean and Gene

When Jean was an infant her father went blind. When she was about 10 he spent some of his meager earnings for her piano tuition, hoping that some day she would Amount to Something. When she was 16, however, and Broadway failed to doff its lid to her Steinway-ing, she joined a cafe floor show in which she poses in the lewd.

The other night her blind father came to Broadway—to hear her play the piano. She told her story hurriedly to the manager, who instructed the pianist, Gene Kent, in the orchestra, to play his specialty, Gershwin's "Rhapsody." Before he played it, the master of ceremonies announced:

"Our popular GENE will now play for you the 'Rhapsody in Blue' which all Broadway cheers. All right, GENE!"

Gene played the "Rhapsody" while Jean paraded by her blind father practically naked.

Nifty

And John Anderson says a wisecrack is an epigram made by the other fellow.

Alibi

Most of us punctuate our lives being wicked merely to break the monotony of being good.

HERO RIDES FASTEST HORSE AS USUAL IN ALDINE

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

The movie West hasn't changed much. It is just as wild and woolly as it ever was in the old Bill Hart days. If you don't believe this drop over to the Aldine and see the latest Zane Grey shooting-talkie. It is titled "The Last of the Duanes."

It is all about a nice home-loving cowboy, who becomes an outlaw. And your sympathy is all for him—homeless, hunted and hungry. But everything turns out all right at the finale. He saves the girl and she is his forever after.

George O'Brien is the hero. A price is on his head. But he doesn't worry. That galloping horse of his can beat the best the Law rides. Funny thing, this! Cowboy heroes always have the fastest horses.

Myrna Loy is there as a vampish sort of creature. She's a nasty creature, too. She even strikes the fragile heroine right across the face. Somehow, Miss Loy seems out of her element in the Golden West atmosphere. She looks homesick for the South Sea Islands.

The picture shows some intelligent direction. It manages some impressive moments. Take the death of the old outlaw who a long time ago promised someone he'd never die with his boots on! He had folks in those days.

The picture creates and sustains action. It is fast moving entertainment.

RESINOL "HEALED EVERY PIMPLE"

Writes Miss Klug

"For some years I have had a rough and pimply skin. I tried many kinds of skin lotions and creams, but none of them seemed to do any good. One day I saw your advertisement for Resinol Ointment and sent for a sample. The results were so good, I bought a full size jar. It cleared away the redness and roughness, and healed every pimple. Now I always keep a jar on hand, and am glad to pass along a good word for Resinol."

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's question: Crime is fast increasing here. Do you see any reason for this?

Mr. Cook

JAMES S. COOK, North Side, machinist: The answer to this question is prohibition, as far as I can see. If this question were settled, I believe there would be a great decrease in crime.

Mr. Kuhns

ROBERT M. KUHNS, North Side, shipper: Unemployment is the main cause for the increase in crime. Of course, I believe there are many other causes; dissatisfaction in politics has a great deal to do with it.

Mr. Keenan.

WILLIAM KEENAN, Lawrenceville, driver: My one and only answer to this question is unemployment. That is the cause of so much crime at the present time. If this situation could be relieved, I believe that a great diminution of crime would be effected.

Miss Stone

MISS JANE STONE, North Side, stenographer: Politics are the cause of most of the city's crime. The inability of one politicians to please everyone causes discontentment and finally, as a general rule, an increase in crime.

Mr. Barvek

BERNARD BARVECK, Lawrenceville, salesman: Prohibition is the chief cause of the increase of crime, as it is the root of most of the evils of our country. When this amendment is repealed I think that the improvement of conditions in general will be very evident.

Miss Fucci

MISS MARY FUCCI, North Side, clerk: I think that crime increase is due to the period of unemployment we are going through. People are left with nothing to do and finally revert to crime.

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Sept. 27.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Mr. Hoover is doing something that if I was touting him I don't believe I would let him do. He is going into three or four states where the coming election is very hot, and going to make speeches, not political speeches, but nevertheless they are in those states. But whatever he talks on it will be construed as political. Funny thing about us, we will listen to any old shyster politician that comes along to advise us, but we just won't trust any of our president when we think they are trying to tell us who to elect.

Yours,
WILL.

Father Meets Raquel When She Returns Home

CHAPTER LXIV.

Raquel Rojos Parker hurried into a rickety day coach of the rackety train and selected a seat toward the rear of the car.

Ahead of her, a half dozen cattlemen in broad hats and bright-colored cotton blouses disposed themselves awkwardly on the worn red plush cushions. Two or three urban gentlemen, as one knew by the city cut of the clothes, had parked bulky cases and bags on racks and along the aisle—traveling salesmen, out to dispose of their wares.

One of the cattlemen, Raquel noticed, wore a blouse of a deep watermelon pink and a gray green silk neckerchief from which he had forgotten to remove the price tag. He eyed her covertly, and then took the seat almost opposite, a little to the front. He would try out the devastating effect of his new "riggings." Raquel turned to the window to conceal the smile she did not want him to see.

The train gave a lurch, creaked in all its joints. Then, with a great screeching of its aged steam whistle, it got under way.

The train drew out of Phoenix, Ariz.

Raquel Rojos Parker was going home—back to Hermosa and the desert, with little rills of mingled anticipation and apprehension trickling along her spine.

Lucy, her mother, had wanted her to come. How much only one who knew Lucy and read the pathos between the lines of her brief response to Raquel's first letter home, could guess.

Jerry thought that she should go. He would go with her.

Jerry Becomes Ill

Raquel found difficulty in persuading him it would be better for her to go alone, this first time.

She had no way of knowing conditions in the 'dobe shack. They might be even worse than when she fled from them.

"I don't see how I am going to get on without you all that time," Jerry argued.

"You did well enough for the years before you had me," Raquel teased, perching on the arm of Jerry's chair, where she could not see that look of the hurt boy in his gray eyes.

He pulled her down upon his knees and held her hungrily. The hunger for her seemed never to be appeased.

"I'll run every step of the way," she promised. "I think—it is best—I go alone."

He knew she was thinking of the 'dobe shack. She did not want him to see it—not yet; to face with her what might have happened there. Reluctantly he consented.

At the last moment she almost gave it up. Jerry was not feeling so fit. Faint purplish rings traced a warning under the gray of his eyes. He was restless throughout the nights; slept fitfully. Often when he tossed in a semi-consciousness of sleep she would go to him, place her cool hand on his brow. It was hot—and damp.

She had persuaded him to consult a physican. He agreed because she was so insistant in the matter. The physician recommend a specialist. The specialist said he would see about it."

Remembers Conductor

So it was arranged she should go alone, and report to Jerry immediately what had happened during her absence. She was to spare no expense to right things, as much as they could be righted.

"Don't be hard on your father, dear one," Jerry told her. "There is something in the man, somewhere. We must find it. Help him to find himself."

She looked at Jerry a little bewildered. She had suddenly found that she did not want to be hard on Pancho.

Dust was sifting through the crevices of the car, filling it with an acrid haze. The door at the front opened. A puff of dust was blown in; it swirled along the aisle toward her.

She closed her eyes. When she opened them again—yes, what she saw was no ghost. That red-faced fellow with the frayed blue cap—the conductor who had let her ride to Phoenix on a night of high adventure more than two years ago.

She crouched down in her seat, and kept her face to the window until the conductor stopped at her seat. Then she turned and gave him the full gaze of her black eyes with the merry imps dancing in them.

"Jumpin' Jehoshaphat!" he gasped, pushing the cap back from his grimy brow and scratching the back of his puzzled head with a blunt thumb and forefinger.

She broke into a laugh.

"Then you remember me," she said.

Pays Debt

"Remember you?" he burst out. "Lady, I'd know you if it was a thousand years from now. Though you don't look the same—"

His eyes took appraisal of the elegance of her traveling togs, of the great ruby that smoldered on the third finger of her left hand above a narrow platinum band set with rubies.

"I don't blame you," she laughed. "I've changed." She thought: and so have you. His face was dry, seamed, in the daylight. His faded blue eyes were red where the tiny blood-vessels had burst. Dust. Heat. The desert.

"Well, well," he chuckled. "Glad to have you ridin' with me again."

"That's nice of you," she said. "That other was the most exciting ride I have ever had."

Her mind went back to other days.

Ships at sea. A black car with onyx and silver. When she first came to New York and the driver took her into the park. The Deauville road. No, she had not exaggerated.'

She opened a bag—it was of fine seal leather with a tiny monogram that glittered—selected a bill, and handed it to the conductor.

He examined it thoughtfully. A hundred-dollar bill.

"I'm afraid I can't change this, lady." Just as on that never-to-be-forgotten ride.

She waited for the blunt thumb and forefinger. Her laughter bubbled over.

"Then don't," she said. "I've owed it to you a long time. Here's my ticket. I want you to buy your wife a pretty dress."

Father Meets Her

It was a long time before she could persuade him that the bill really belonged to him.

Toward the close of the day the landscape outside the train window assumed a familiarity that set her tingling. Long stretches of dun-colored dust. Mesquite powdered with it. Trails snaking through the dun. The sky a brilliant bowl of color like the gargantuan painting of a master artist.

That dark patch huddled against the dun! Her heart was held as in a vise. She suddenly felt weak, giddy. Burning hot. Icy cold.

"Ermosay." Puffs of dust that blotted out the stooped figure with the frayed cap pushed back from grimy brow. The train creaking, protesting in every joint, clattering to a stop.

She rushed along the aisle, choking with the dust, and clambered down the rickety steps.

A great bull of a man with bristling black mustachios and black eyes that peered from beneath bushy brows swaggered toward her.

"Pancho!" she cried, and ran to fling herself on his chest.

"It's time you showed up, gal," he rumbled. "Leaving us without a word."

She clung to him. "Where's—Lucy?"

Was it imagination, or were the eyes of this great toro really damp and dim?

"Lucy's waitin'," he said. There must be something in his throat. Something husky.

Calls to Boy Friend at His Office an Unwise Practice, Says Fay King

By FAY KING

Calling the boy friend up during business hours is not best for his interests.

No matter how briefly and business-like he may answer your cooing conversation, there is bound to be a beam in his eye and a happy flush to his cheek that informs the office there is more heart than head to the "business call" in hand.

Many bosses object to this.

All telephone talk should be on a telegram basis. Say as much as you can in ten words, and don't run too many over fifty.

In telephone etiquette it is the lady's place to say "good-bye."

Be considerate of those who are waiting at a public telephone booth. Their message may be a very important one.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Loves Awakening

The Travelers Continue on to Kingston

"Yes, I know," Lillian agreed when I had outlined my reasons for not agreeing to her proposal to leave our car in its precarious position upon the icy mountain road and walk to the nearest house. "Only—but there's Mary coming back. Listen! She's singing!"

The words floated up to us, through the darkness, in Mary's clear caroling tones, and I recognized a favorite chant of hers: "We ain't got a barrel of money, we may look ragged and funny, but we're rolling along, singing a song——"

"I wonder if she imagines herself and Noel gypsying by the side of the road," Lillian whispered, but I had not time to reply, for Mary was running lightly as she sang, and in another two seconds had rounded the curve and come up to the car.

"I beg leave to report," she said, with her hand up in a military salute, "that the road is clear, not icy, and with enough snow along the sides to give a grip to the wheels."

"How is it just behind the car?" I asked. "Very icy?"

"Toss me the flashlight and I'll look it over," she replied, and when she had finished her inspection her verdict was reassuring.

"No, there's some snow right behind you. The bad ice ended, I guess, right at this place where you skidded."

"Then," I decided, "I'll back down, Lillian, I'm going to ask you and Mary to walk down to the bottom of the hill."

"Why?" Lillian demanded sharply. "If you think the danger of the car going over the brink is sufficient to make you want us out of it you're not going to move it one inch."

"Please hug to your soul your own time-honored admonition not to be an anointed idiot because you know how," I retorted, although secretly the consideration she had named had been in the back of my mind. "Don't you realize that someone will have to stand at the foot of the hill with a flashlight so as to be able to warn any possible ascending motorist?"

"But that won't need two of us," Mary put in. "And I have an amendment to your scheme. This backing down in the dark is going to be some job. But you'll only go by inches, so why can't I walk beside the car and give you a 'Gee haw!' now and then?"

"You mean," I said, "between the car and the railing? Suppose it slipped, you'd be——"

"But it isn't going to," she said gayly.

With the reassurance she had given me concerning the snow on the roadway, I capitulated.

"Needs must, I suppose," I quoted. "Get the other flashlight out, dear, I want to take a look at these wheels."

I climbed out of the car and inspected the wheels carefully, finding to my joy that the rear wheels were pointing toward the mountainside instead of the precipice. In backing down also the white railing bordering the road would be directly inside me at my left as I sat at the wheel. I really would not need Mary's aid, but I did not dare refuse it again, for fear both Lillian and Mary would think the car was in real danger of going over the precipice.

"Do you want me to go to the foot of the hill now?" Lillian asked.

"Yes, please, but be sure to take a position from which you can jump to one side if the car comes down quickly. I won't start until you're all ready, Mary, go far enough with her so you can see the gleam from her flashlight."

I waited until Mary returned before getting back into the car. And then, while she stood watchfully beside me, I put my foot upon the footbrake, then shifted the gear lever from first to reverse and released the emergency inch by inch. We glided backward so easily, even around the curve, that I found myself enjoying the experience, as I do any new motoring angle. But when we had turned around at the foot of the hill and were headed once more for Kingston I let the car out along the level road in a burst of speed which I would not have dared before.

For I had just remembered that Mrs. Hasbrouck had said her husband would accompany the private detective if he got away before seven. If the man were a reckless driver, as I surmised, and struck that icy stretch along the mountainside at full speed—could I get to the Train's home in time to warn Mr. Hasbrouck by telephone of the danger on the road?

Horoscopes

Sunday, September 28

Sunday's horoscope accents cultural, social and mystical pursuits, inclining the mind and the activities in this direction. In this connection there may be a peculiar angle or experience, but some care is enjoined with the handling of papers or writings. There is a hint of the spectacular in social affairs.

Those whose birthday it is are assured of a year with experiences and adventures out of the routine.

A child born on this day may be fit for "treason, stratagem and spoils" and may have a spectacular or unusual career, succeeding in secret organization or through subtle methods.

Monday, September 29

Monday's astrological forecast is for tenacious obstructions of the best-laid plans and enterprises, unless resort be had to conspiracy, secret agreement or the assistance of strong combinations or secret societies. These may bridge over difficult situations, which may also be assisted by particularly clever manipulation or pulling personal wires.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year calling for much clever management and astute insight.

A child born on this day may be tenacious, steadfast and industrious, but may be disposed also to gain its ends by methods of strategy and secrecy. It may encounter many difficulties, especially in the employment of others.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND.

But, Just the Old, Old Bluff

When a man begins talking of being "good pals," a clever women listens with a cryptic smile, and lets him go right on babbling. For she knows that when you put the LID on love, you merely hasten the combustion.

We used to call it platonic friendship—now it's just "being good pals."

But it's the same beautiful old myth in which every man tries to believe, every woman longs to believe, and both of them pretend to believe.

Sometimes, this glorified affection always ends in the same place—on a girl's lips!

What a man really wants is not platonic friendship, but a sort of de-natured LOVE—a non-inflammable, non-intoxicating emotion, guaranteed to stimulate him, but not to make him so dizzy that he will stumble into any serious admissions.

Platonic friendship is the plank over which he hopes to cross safely the dangerous quicksands of love, without "falling in."

It is the charming camouflage behind which he fancies he is concealing his emotions when he can no longer hide the love-light in his eyes.

It is the armor which a cautious, non-marrying man puts on, when he feels that he is weakening toward a woman, and which he is always amazed to find crumbling like plaster of Paris, before the flood of his own emotions.

It is the drawbridge over which he fancies he can always retreat when he feels he is about to surrender.

What a woman really longs for, is to be some man's "Egeria"—his inspirational, platonic friend—until she can discover whether she wants to marry him or not.

Platonic friendship is the little side-gate by which she hopes to slip into his affections, when he isn't looking.

A man doesn't suggest "platonic friendship" until he finds himself growing too weak to struggle against a woman's charms, and fears he is going down for the third time. Then he grasps desperately at the "good pal" stuff.

As a child fights against the "Sandman" so a man fights against falling in love—and the myth of platonic friendship is the fairy tale which he hopes will keep his eyes open.

But Platonic Friendship, alas, is a ship which starts for Nowhere, and always ends in the harbor of Love, or goes down in a storm of misunderstanding.

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Congratulating a Man Friend

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Should a letter of congratulation being sent by a man to a male friend who has just been married be addressed to him personally, or to "Mr. and Mrs." the writer never having met "Mrs?" S.

Your letter of congratulation should be addressed only to "Mr." However, after the main part of your letter which, of course, will be taken up with your congratulations and offering of best wishes to your friend, you should dedicate a sentence or two to "The Mrs." asking your friend to tell his wife of your felicitations and best wishes. It is customary, for instance, to write something of this nature: "Please tell Rose—you see I am already thinking of us as old friends, since she is now the wife of an old friend—that I am sending her, too, my heartiest felicitations and my good wishes for happiness always. I expect to be asked to be one of the seasoned, old guests at your fiftieth wedding anniversary! And do let me meet your wife soon, for I have many things to tell her of my admiration for you—although, of course, I probably cannot add to her enthusiasm for you! All friendliest wishes to you both."

Social Calls

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. After having attended a party given by a lady who has not called, ought I to call on her or wait for her to call?

2. When a lady who is away visiting when I move into town, returns, ought I to call on her or wait for her to call?

MARY

1. You should call on her. In this case, the fact that she invited you to her party serves as a substitute for a call.

2. You should wait for her to call.

Household Hints

Apples will keep sound if packed in sawdust.

When at a loss as to how to decorate the table for the children's party, buy a pound of animal crackers and a pound of vanilla wafers. Dip the feet of the animals into a cream icing and stand an animal on each wafer. Let stand until thoroughly set and dry. Arrange to advantage and see how pleased the kiddies will be with the menagerie.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Can Anybody Get Anything in This World Just by Depending on His Wishbone?

Remember Dream Girl, who sat around all day, being sorry for herself?

Friend Husband was hipped on another girl. She had "no clothes to wear . . . "no place to make whoopee" . . . So instead of trying to fix things up with a little healthy hustling, she invented a Dream World for herself, and sat hour after hour, watching fairy pictures glow and fade . . . while her little son ran around neglected and the house went haywire.

Dream Girl thought that she 'n' her dreams were Big Time Stuff. But her motions gave Maxine a pain. Maxine, too, had her troubles. But did she dream her life away? Not by several sticks of dynamite!

"Dear Sally:

"I just read the letter from Dream Girl, and it inspires me to make a few remarks. Personally, I think what she needs is a good sound shaking. My gosh! You can't expect things to 'just come to you' in this life. You've got to use your head and your pep and make 'em come, if you want 'em. Nobody else is going to make your life for you, and any and all of us could just sit and moon if we were crazy enough to. Goodness knows we have just as much reason to as she has. Maybe not the same reasons. But we all get things handed to us, and if we're going to just sit and glump about it, what's life ever going to get to?

Nothing! That's what!

"I had a fine husband, and we loved each other, but he objected to going out, too. For the first year we were married he would take me out one night a week . . . then he wanted to stay home all the time. And when I objected to that, he tried to get me to go out with his brother. There were a lot of things that we didn't agree about, and that was one of them. But did I just sit and feel sorry for myself? I did not! One night I said to him, 'Now, listen, boy friend. If this is your idea of a good time, just reading and sleeping all the time, it isn't mine. So, from now on, when I feel like going out, I'm going!' And I did it.

"I did my part. But when my work was done, I went out. I was true to my man. I didn't chase with other men. But neither did I sit like a bump on a log. I got busy and made some fun for myself. There were plenty of nice places to go with other girls. And I read, too, and talked to my husband about what he read. I wasn't dumb enough to let him get his fun by talking to some other jane.

"And then just 18 months ago—Ralph died. And that was a terrible blow to me. But did I sit down and gloom around about what I had lost? I did not. I have learned to get along without help from any one. And if I had a sweet little son, like Dream Girl has, I wouldn't worry about anything.

"Wake up, Dream Girl! Don't sit around and dream of those good times you'd like. Get busy and go after them. If we want a happy life in this world, we've got to dig after it.

"If that husband of yours is so crazy about that girl, and don't want you, get out and let him have her. You don't need him to show you a good time. I was only 18 when I came to this place, and I knew no one but my husband. I was almost a thousand miles from home and friends. If I had sat at home 'dreaming' about what I'd like to have happen to me, I'd have been in a peck of misery, but I didn't. I went out and made a place for myself, and if he didn't want to go, I let him do as he pleased.

"I miss him terribly, for I loved him deeply, but I am not sitting down under that, either. And gradually that ache in my heart is leaving me. I will never forget him, but neither am I going to spend the rest of my life in grief. People think I am hard, because I have been going out ever since he left me, but I have to go. I will not sit and think about it.

"So snap out of it, Dream Girl. You're wasting your time! And here's wishing you happiness.

MAXINE."

A great letter, girl—and a true one. Nobody ever got anything in the world by depending on his wishbone. If you want happiness — love — success — power, you've got to hustle for them. You'll buy yourself nothing but grief if you sit down and wait for them to come to you—if you give yourself up to dreams—Dreams, it is true, have their place. Everything that we have—all beauty, all science, all engineering, all invention—started in a dream. But the dream never accomplished anything until it was put into action.

Dreams are Big Medicine—If they lead to performance. They're deadly if they don't. The life that gives itself over to dreaming, goes to pieces very quickly. For "idle dreaming" is the most cowardly form of escape. It's a deliberate running away from reality—a deliberate wallowing in mental dope.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Seven Rules for the New Mother

God couldn't be everywhere so He made mothers. They have the hardest but the best of jobs.

They are ever eager to give proper care to their babies.

Every month in the year is a difficult one for every mother. It is particularly difficult for the mother of very young children.

Today I want to talk to the new mothers. Every year thousands of babies are born in homes where there are no other children. It is an entirely new experience for the young mother. Naturally it is greater than that of the experienced mother.

DR COPELAND

It occurs to me I might outline some of the important things which will help to keep your baby well and happy. Suppose I give these suggestions under seven heads:

Air and Sunshine

During certain hours every day in the year, except in the rare time of a terrible storm, the baby should be taken out-of-doors. Fresh air, day and night, is absolutely necessary.

Food

The feedings must be accurately and carefully made. In their preparation clean hands and clean utensils are essential.

The baby must be fed at regular times. You must be regular as clockwork in this matter.

Water

Two-thirds of the weight of the human body is water. All the functions are carried on by organs and tissues which must be kept moist. To this end lots of water must be given the baby.

Don't wait until the infant suffers from thirst and cries in protest. Give boiled and cooled water at regular intervals.

Sleep

A normal infant sleeps from twenty to twenty-two hours out of every twenty-four. All the surroundings must be arranged with reference to comfortable and undisturbed sleep.

Cleanliness

Whether you believe in the germ theory or not, you certainly believe in cleanliness. Never forget that the body, nose, mouth, the clothing, feeding outfits and all the toys of the infant must be included in your efforts at cleanliness.

Exercise

It is more important for the baby to use the muscles than it is for the grown-up. Spread a clean sheet or quilt on the floor in a sunny room and let the youngster stretch and kick and coo to its heart's content. This will develop strength and promote health.

Habits

Don't resort to "pacifiers," rubber rings and other things to chew on. Keep the infant's thumb out of the mouth. Start right and keep right as regards baby's habits.

Of course, the things I outline do not cover everything you must know about a baby's care. But these suggestions will be a help if you follow them without neglecting to take your own doctor's good advice.

Furnishing Your Home

Coverings for Day Beds

The covering for a day bed is the only way in which it can be made part of the ensemble of the living room. The day bed is growing more popular because it is convenient for the smaller apartments of today. And it solves the living room bedroom problem in the one-room apartment.

It can be given a living room atmosphere in the daytime, and at night provides a bed for the occasional guest.

It can be made to harmonize with the ensemble of the living room by putting on it the right type of cover.

The point is to make it appear as decorative as it is useful. To do this it should look like a couch or sofa during the day and harmonize with the living room color scheme.

All day bed coverings should be of a fabric that is strong enough to stand hard wear, light enough to be easily removed and folded up for the night, and of a texture that does not show wrinkles.

That is why these fabrics are the most frequently chosen: Velour, chintz, cotton rep, and printed linen.

All of these are practical and smart. Whichever one is actually chosen depends on the draperies of the living room and the other chair covers. Because the day bed covering should match or blend in texture and color with the draperies and chairs.

Public Lose Faith in Our Big Leaders

—By B. C. FORBES—

B. C. Forbes

PEOPLE THROUGHOUT the country are becoming very sore. They are sick of repeated attacks on stock market values by bears. They are incensed over short selling of wheat, whether by the Russian government or by home speculators. In agricultural states indignation rules because of the tragically low prices for most farm products. Bitter complaint is made that America is utterly without leadership. Ordinary folks can't understand why the powers that be sit idly by and let destructionists wreck values. Intense dissatisfaction is expressed not only by unemployed not only by farmers, but by all classes.

The notion widely prevails that everything could be changed were "the money interests" anxious to have things changed. Some even hint that certain of our most powerful corporations are perfectly willing to see things go as they have been going in order to wipe out weak competitors and thus cut down overproduction.

The "money interests" might or might not be able to accomplish miracles were they to try earnestly. The naked truth is that pessimism has been as rampant in the highest financial and business circles as elsewhere. Retrenchment has been as drastic at the top as at the bottom.

This country has prided itself on the courage and daring and enterprise and Napoleonic achievements of its leaders. We have gloried in attaining world supremacy in wealth, in invention, in industry, etc.

Today not courage but fear rules. The biggest are just as timid as the littlest. Nobody looks up, everybody is looking down.

Never before have so many complaining letters deluged this column. Our leaders have sunk in the estimation of the public. Nor have our billion dollar corporations risen in favor.

It behooves high-ups to bestir themselves and do something, even at self-sacrifice and sacrifice of immediate profit, to do all within their power to bring about less discontent, less pessimism, less depression, less unemployment.

PERHAPS HE should have his head examined, anyway, the writer had the audacity to buy a few stocks yesterday.

How long they will be held will depend on the course business follows in the final quarter of the year.

VARIOUS COMMODITIES look like rare bargains. An outburst of buying for the rise would be entirely logical.

THE NEW GOVERNOR of the Federal Reserve Board, Eugene Meyer, has lost no time in calling together heavyweights interested in our national agricultural problems. Last time I talked with him—just before he went to Washington—he was very eager to find ways and means to utilize the resources and the influence of the reserve board to check the decline in cotton and grain prices and to create a less hopeless state of mind concerning our most important industry, agriculture. Unfortunately, he has had vast experience, more experience than any other man in America, in handling financial assistance to agriculture.

It may be that Mr. Legge and he will be able to accomplish more than heretofore has seemed possible.

DO YOU REMEMBER the wildcat selling of land by Muscle Shoals real estate boomers? Gordon C. Smith, secretary of the Las Vegas (Nevada) Board of Trade, asks this column to beware of unscrupulous promoters of Boulder Dam "real estate projects and stock schemes." He adds:

"Check up all offerings by writing local banks or this association."

Walter Chrysler's statisticians have figured out that 20 per cent more automobiles will be sold in the next five years than in the last five years. Here's hoping.

ABBEY OF NEW MEMORIAL MAUSOLEUM

INTERIOR OF THE DIGNIFIED ABBEY AT NEW MOUNT ROYAL MEMORIAL MAUSOLEUM

Building Trade Executives to Hold Meet

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27. — With the general economic welfare of the country more closely linked with the problems of the construction industry than ever before, national attention early next month will be focused upon the gathering of the outstanding construction leaders at the fall meeting of the executive board of the Associated General Contractors of America, October 6, 7 and 8, at Rye, N. Y.

Selected by President Hoover and the nation's business leaders as the key industry in the program to tide business over the present depression, the construction industry is now undergoing a thorough housecleaning, with a view to making it a more effective business balance wheel, and further developments in this program at the Rye meeting will be watched with general interest.

SHRINE HOLDS 1,200 CRYPTS

The atmosphere of dignity created by the Mt. Royal memorial mausoleum has resulted in the development of increased public attention.

The location and design of the structure, which contains 40 private rooms and 1,200 crypts, have created a strong appeal to individuals desiring to provide a suitable resting place in advance of need.

The mausoleum has frequently been called the Westminster Abbey of Pittsburgh. It is located in the Mt. Royal Cemetery.

BANK MERGERS HURT CREDIT

Bank mergers are strengthening the financial institutions of the country, but at the same time they are weakening the credit of the small business man, according to Maj. J. Gay Seabourne, president of the New Jersey Industrial Lenders' Association and of the Conservative Credit System.

He said:

"We recognize the fact that every time a change occurs in our economic system, no matter how good it may be, some one suffers through this improvement or change. In this case, many business men have suffered, which has created a greater demand on the resources of personal finance companies.

"Where in the past they tried to finance 85 per cent of the population, they must now try to accommodate 90 per cent of the people. For the additional 5 per cent, we must thank bank mergers. We hope that commercial bankers will put their heads together and take back into their fold the small business man."

SCHOOL STARTS NEW CLASSES

The register of Pittsburgh School of Accountancy, a private school of advanced business practice, announces the largest enrolment in its history. In order to accommodate freshmen, it has been necessary to form two additional classes. A new 6 o'clock class will be formed at once and 8 o'clock class will be opened on October 15.

The Pace course in accounting and business administration as taught at Pittsburgh School of Accountancy, offers thorough preparation for the degree of certified public accountant, as granted by the state. Further, it offers training for executive positions such as controller, auditor, treasurer, credit manager, cost executive, tax specialist and value analyst.

Slow Progress Made in Trade Recovery

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

PROGRESS TOWARD RECOVERY is still slow. While some improvement in business activity has taken place this month, the increase has been less than the normal seasonal gains for this time of the year. It has been smaller than was generally predicted before Labor Day.

Steel mills are working at about 60 per cent of capacity. Since the beginning of August production has been gaining but at such a slow pace that the progress is almost imperceptible.

In other types of activity conditions are similar. Sales and operations are slightly greater than last summer but the gains give little reason for jubilation.

Break In Market

SHARP DECLINES IN PRICES of both stocks and grains during the past week are likely to prove retarding influences to the recovery of business. While public participation in the stock market is limited in comparison to a year ago, the liquidation will still have a disturbing influence to business confidence.

A few weeks ago an optimistic attitude towards the final months of the year was becoming quite prevalent. Recent developments, however, have considerably dampened the hopes of many. The belief is still general that the depth of the depression has been passed but the prospects for any sharp recovery before the close of the year are becoming less promising. The real recovery of business is now expected after the close of the year.

Trend Uncertain

WHILE THERE HAVE been gains, it is extremely difficult to detect any definite trend. It is practically impossible to tell whether the moderate upward movement this month has been merely seasonal or whether it marks a distinct reversal towards better times.

The final two months of the year are usually marked by a slackening of production as industry prepares for its inventory taking period. Retail sales move in the opposite direction, however, as they reflect holiday purchases.

Allowing for year-end dullness there is little of the present year left in which business can be expected to make its future course apparent. Holiday buying at retail is likely to be dull in line with unsatisfactory employment during most of the summer.

Next Year's Plans

THE GENERAL REALIZATION of this fact is apparent in the plans being made by many business organizations for the inauguration of new policies and the starting of new plans. "After the first of the year" seems to be the time set for all efforts to make the wheels of industry turn faster.

There is one fact about previous depressions which should not be forgotten. The recovery from a very large share of them has been rapid. In some cases, when improvement has gotten underway, it has completely ignored all seasonal precedents in the march toward good times.

The current depression was started with a comparatively small burden of inventories which were not readily liquifiable. The year has seen the paring down of surplus stocks to an exceptionally low level. The radio and automobile industries in particular are doing business with moderate stocks on hand compared to a year ago.

No great amount of buying would be needed to rapidly stimulate production, particularly since output during the past summer has been below consumption in most lines.

CHEAP MONEY STAYS STOCK DECLINE

Real Wall Street Conflict Between Pessimism and Low Rate of Interest

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—A factor that stays the decline in stock prices, after violent and highly emotional declines, is the persistent influence of cheap money, which operates as a price-sustaining ingredient.

The real conflict in Wall Street is less between the bulls and the bears than between pessimism and subnormal business profits, on the one hand, making for a decline of stock prices, and superlatively low interest rates on the other. The precipitously two-sided character of the market this year, with alternations of rallies followed on a number of occasions by unrestrained collapses, reflects the operation of these two conflicting market influences.

Mr. Rukeyser

Cheap money, reflecting not only the diminished demand of depressed business, but also the artificial policy of the Federal Reserve system, has shown positive results in the substantial rise in the prices of bonds and high-grade stocks. Moreover, it has had a less visible effect in holding stock prices above the lower level which they otherwise would tend to seek in periods of public fright and crippled prosperity. Whether wittingly or not, the administration and the Federal Reserve system have been siding with the bulls. Eventually supply and demand fix prices, but artificial intervention can and often does defer the ultimate readjustment.

BONDS FAVORED

As long as business continues subnormal and the Federal Reserve policy remains unchanged, it is safe to assume that bonds and other fixed return investments will be favored marketwise. Moreover, the policy of the money overlords adds to the hazards of indiscriminate short selling of stocks, especially toward the tail ends of episodes of heavy liquidation.

There appears to be more pessimism about business prospects on park benches and on Pullman smokers than among well-informed executives in command of the leading corporations, many of whom, in response to my inquiries, have asserted that they consider raw material prices sufficiently cheap to warrant substantial forward buying.

Such buying ahead is not confined to public utilities, which followed the example of the Bell Telephone system in placing copper orders four months ahead. The head of one of the great industrial corporations which make a diversified array of products for industry, told me that he has been placing some recent orders for large quantities of raw materials in the fields of copper, rubber, cotton, cloth, wire, etc. His present policy is to cover 50 per cent of estimated requirements for as far as three to six months ahead.

SELL BELOW COSTS

In giving the philosophy behind such a procedure, he confided to me:

"It is our belief that in some of these markets selling prices are below current costs and that while it is possible for prices to go a fraction lower, the probability is that they will get to a level more consistent with actual cost of production. And by actual cost of production I mean costs as revised since the economy program has been making rapid strides throughout industry.

"I think we are beginning to get a moderate seasonal upturn in business this fall, but that it will be March of next year before the country, generally, will be looking over their shoulder and saying, 'Well, I guess that depression is over.'

TUBULAR STEEL ELEVATOR SHAFTS ON CHRYSLER BUILDING

COMPANY FILLS LARGE ORDER

American Tubular Elevator Company of Pittsburgh has completed the filling of a contract for tubular steel towers used to hoist building materials during the erection of the Chrysler Building, tallest structure in the world, now nearing completion in New York City.

The towers are identical with those supplied during the construction of the Koppers Building, William Penn Annex, Bell Telephone Company's building, Grant Building and the Pittsburgher Hotel.

To supply increasing demand for this type of equipment, the American Tubular Elevator Company recently constructed a new plant on Neville Island. This replaced the original plant at 4200 Second avenue.

The Chrysler towers required the use of 14 miles of pipe. At the same time the Bank of Manhattan Building, second largest in the world, was using 21 miles of tubular steel.

The company's engineers are developing new uses for the material. Increased demand has resulted from the economy and ease of erection as well as additional safety.

MARKED GAIN IN STEEL DEMAND

Steel's September Unfilled Tonnage Report Will Probably Show Gain

By B. E. V. LUTY.

Increase in steel demand and production has been growing more marked. From the low point there is possibly as much as 15 per cent increase in buying, while the increase in tonnage of steel ingot production is probably all of 10 per cent. Predictions are that there will be some further increase in buying and production.

It is difficult to form a definite opinion as to whether the improvement in steel is wholly of seasonal character or is partly a reflection of improvement in general business. No improvement in general business other than seasonal is thus far reflected by any of the important indices. Bank debits have been dropping increasingly far below those of a year previous despite the fact that a year ago business activity was decreasing. Even allowing for decreased prices, the Bureau of Labor's data on commodity prices at wholesale showing 14 per cent decrease, the decrease in bank debits seems to indicate a cumulative decrease in the physical volume of trade.

SEASONAL GAIN

If the improvement in steel is as great as commonly reported, it is all that could be expected of a seasonal improvement; for a very substantial portion of the sum total of steel consumption must be counted out as not having any seasonal improvement. There is the automobile industry, which since June has been falling further and further under usual seasonal variation. There is line pipe, with production already at capacity for several months; fabricated structural steel has been at a rather high pace, very steadily held and with no sign of increase now. Finally, there was some freight car building just recently while now there is practically none.

FARM IMPLEMENTS

A seasonal improvement in steel would have to be supplied altogether by lines of consumption not enumerated above. A conspicuous one is farm implements, now getting into their season of manufacture for spring distribution and use, and there are various seasonal lines like stoves and ranges. Progressive increase in steel demand cannot continue long unless there is substantial improvement in the general business situation, for while seasonal increase at this time is in accordance with precedents, seasonal decrease late in the year is likewise indicated by precedents.

In all probability the next unfilled tonnage report of the Steel Corporation will show an increase. Five of the last six years showed a September increase, the exceptional year being 1927. Last month's large loss in unfilled tonnage by no means presaged a decrease this month, for one can hardly doubt that a large part of that decrease was due to cancellation by the Steel Corporation of obligations that had grown stale.

Gangloff Heads Coraopolis G. O. P.

Burgess P. C. Gangloff, of Coraopolis, one of the Republican nominees for the Legislature in the Twelfth District, has been elected chairman of the Coraopolis Republican Committee, succeeding Judge W. Heber Dithrich, resigned. Other officers elected are Mrs. Ida Byers, vice chairman; P. C. Cullen, secretary, and P. Cupps, treasurer.

The Coraopolis committee has indorsed all candidates on the State Republican ticket.

Treasurer

RALPH E. ANCHORS

BUSINESS MAN'S CAREER VIVID

From driving a team of huskies in the gold rush days to operating a printing establishment is a far cry, but it has all been in the life of Ralph E. Anchors, treasurer and manager of the Bletcher-Anchors Company.

A native of Western Pennsylvania, Mr. Anchors was born on a farm near Red Bank in Armstrong County. After moving with his parents to Washington, Pa., in 1891, he attended the public schools and sold papers.

Going to the Klondike in the days of the gold rush he located at Dawson in the Yukon territory and carried mail with a dog sledge over the famous gold producing creeks of Bonanza, Eldorado, Hunker, Last Chance, Dominion, Gold Run and Sulphur. Many of the old-time "sour doughs" still remember his shrill cry on the frosty air of "Mush on, you malamutes!" Mail carriers also handled newspapers. Mr. Anchors says that his heaviest selling paper was Hearst's San Francisco Examiner. The Sunday issues sold for $1 a copy in the Klondike in those days.

Coming to Pittsburgh in 1902 he immediately went to work in a job printing office and has followed this business ever since, except for a period as preofreader on the old Pittsburgh Times.

In 1912 he formed a partnership with Wm. C. Bletcher and entered the job printing field. This business was later incorporated and has developed rapidly until today his firm is one of the leading institutions of its kind in Pittsburgh.

His hobby is a fruit farm on the outskirts of Washington, Pa., where his friends find him in his leisure hours.

FURNITURE IN NEW TREND

Executives are paying more attention to the attractiveness of their offices and they are realizing the psychological effect of attractive surroundings on the attitude of their clients or customers. This statement was made by Homer Neely, president of the Business Furniture Company in discussing the current trends in his field.

Men of influence in the business world are beginning to wake up to the fact that they spend about one-fourth of their lives in their offices. They are getting past the point where they will tolerate discomfort or lack of taste which would be out of question at their homes or in their clubs, according to Mr. Neely.

The effect of this change in attitude has been an increase in the sale of period business furniture and a marked discrimination in the selection of designs. Draperies and attractive pictures are invading the sanctums of the business world to an extent never known before. It is surprising, Mr. Neely remarked, that it costs such a small amount more to buy attractive furniture than equipment designed with only utilitarian purposes in view.

In serving the new demands for office beauty, metal furniture using aluminum as well as steel is in increased demand.

FIRM DEVELOPS SALES SYSTEM

National distribution of the products of the Lackzoom Laboratories of this city has been steadily developed. The business was established 38 years ago by H. D. Shakarian and its growth has been steady since that time.

Orders for the entire country are filled by the laboratories in this city at 5432 Penn avenue. Branch service stores are also operated at 625 Smithfield street, as well as in Cleveland and Youngstown. O Direct delivery service is maintained in Allegheny County, while orders to more distant points are filled by other means.

Over 90 per cent of the orders are received from physicians or upon their recommendation of the use of the organization's products.

Lackzoom and Acidophilus Milk are scientifically fermented products which have been recognized generally for their health and food values.

Wall Street Confused by Brokers' Loans Report Showing Standoff.

Wall street was plainly and openly confused by the weekly statement on brokers' loans showing a standoff resulting from a period which had witnessed a heavy liquidating movement in the stock market. The statement showed the aggregate of brokers' borrowings as reported to the Federal Reserve unchanged at $3,222,000,000. An increase of $72,000,000 was shown in loans for member banks' own account, only to be offset by reductions of $44,000,000 in advances made for out-of-town correspondents and of $27,000,000 in loans for the account of "others." New issues which came due for payment in the period covered by the figures were not especially heavy and could not have fully offset the liquidation in stocks. In the absence of what looked like sound explanation the street was disposed to await the publication of the consolidated weekly report next Tuesday, to see what transpired so far as loans of those institutions against securities are concerned.

Resistance which developed to selling in Steel common and American Car during yesterday, suggested that these two tried and seasoned wheelhorses of many a "bull campaign" had been selected as the principal recipients of support designed to check the decline in the market. At least it was worthy of note that while most of the other recognized "pivotal" issues yielded at one time or another to new low levels for the year or longer, Steel and Can developed powerful resistance just above the low levels of the current movement. Incidentally it might be said that American Can has attracted no little attention during the current break by its much better behavior under pressure than other so-called leaders.

Yesterday tremendous selling came into radio which slumped to new low levels for the year where it stood only a point or two above the mean low of the November break last year. The stock was under terrific pressure shortly after the opening, rallied by midday, but turned heavy again in the afternoon. Wall street was not a little discouraged by the sharp break which took place in the preferred "B" stock Thursday and by the fact that the senior issue again was heavy yesterday. Report was revived again in some quarters to the effect that the company's results this year would be most keenly disappointing. Heaviness in General Electric and Westinghouse is is all probability partially in reflection of the large interest which those companies hold in Radio as a result of the transfer of their various radio assets to that company in return for a large stock interest.

Both Southern Railway and Great Northern made somewhat better showing for August than had been the case in preceding months this year. Southern shows gross of $9,853,000, against $12,243,000 in August last year, but net is off only to $2,039,000 from $2,873,000 a year ago. Great Northern similarly shows gross reduced by about $2,300,000, compared with August last year to $10,653,000, while net is smaller by only about $700,000, standing at $3,294,000, as against $3,890,000 in August last year. In both cases net for the first eight months shows a reduction of approximately 50 per cent, compared with the same period last year.

Business of the telephone companies should be a very good barometer of conditions. One hundred and three telephone companies in July reported a gross of $98,136,000, compared with $95,309,000 in the corresponding month of last year. For the first seven months of this year gross was $690,349,000, compared with $658,345,000 in the corresponding period of last year. If the telephone companies are able to show a gain in a period of depression, what will they be able to report when business gets back to normal?

Interests close to the management of U. S. Pipe & Foundry state that its results thus far this year have been entirely satisfactory, and have exceeded the predictions made by some observers very early this year. The company is likely to be one of the few to show a substantial increase in earnings this year over the 1929 figures. An important benefit has been the return of easy money conditions, making funds available for financing municipal and other improvements.

Grand Union Sales Show 12½% Gain

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Total store sales of Grand Union Company for the 37 weeks ended September 13 were $25,756,455, comparing with $22,986,802 for the corresponding period of 1929, an increase of $2,769,653 or 12.05 per cent.

Leader

C. G. BUNNELL

Mr. Bunnell, Westinghouse Electric purchasing agent who will lead a discussion of purchasing problems under present day business conditions at the meeting of the sixth district, National Association of Purchasing Agents, in William Penn Hotel, October 16-17.

LIGHT BUYING BY TRUSTS

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Investment companies have been limited buyers of stocks this week on the decline, largely because of restricted cash resources. A few, following closely the practices of strictly investment trusts, which always keep a proportion of resources in cash for just such opportunities, were able to do some buying. Owning a varied assortment of bonds, those investment trusts have been in position to augment cash funds by disposing of some of their interest-bearing securities.

Bond investments have been profitable to the investment trusts able to acquire them on the decline which began early in 1928. The Dow-Jones average of 40 corporation bonds receded from a high of 99.48 in 1928 to a low of 91.76 last October, a difference of 7.72. Within less than 12 months, the average has recovered 5.82 and is currently less than 2 points below the high of 99.48. A recovery of 5.82 on the average for 40 bonds means that various issues have advanced more broadly. Corporations which kept part of their resources over the last year in bonds have had assured income as well as capital gain where contemporary purchases of stock might show losses.

PRODUCE SECURITIES EXCHANGE

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Price fluctuations were slight yesterday on the securities market of the Produce Exchange with trading in low volume over a small number of issues.

The more active issues included Associated Gas and Electric option stock purchase rights, down to 1. Detroit and Canada Tunnel, off ¼, and International Routines Iron.

In the bank group, Irving Trust was off ⅝, Bankers Trust Pfd. in the insurance issues, was off ½.

LUCKY GIRL
BY HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Attitude of Her Family Makes Cathie Sad

CHAPTER XXX

Cathie's mouth was wide open. She stared at her mother with round, unbelieving eyes. What was she saying? That Mrs. Hennessy, old Mrs. Hennessy next door, was gossiping about her and a divorce? Why it was silly . . . perfectly silly . . . as if she didn't have enough real troubles without this . . .

She said in a voice that was choked and shaking, "Mrs. Hennessy! I'd like to know how she knows about my affairs!"

"Through Lillian," Mrs. Paige repeated gently. "Lillian heard it in some way, and she came to her mother with the morsel to roll on her tongue, and you know Mrs. Hennessy. She couldn't wait to get over to me with it."

She sighed again, and straightened her hat that was slipping backwards as usual. She was beginning to feel more natural. There was no mistaking the guiltlessness in Cathie's still childish blue eyes.

"She makes me sick!" Cathie burst out. "And as for Lillian—" She broke off. She was going to add that Lillian had been to see her, trying to sell some diamonds, but what was the use of adding to the trouble? She decided not to mention it.

False Rumors

"But she's been very good to us, darlin'," Mary Paige said, conscientiously. "All the years of letting us use the telephone and one thing and another."

Cathie nodded. She couldn't think of anything more to say. For six months she had been waiting for this—for her mother to come to see her. Now she was here, and it was all spoiled. "Well, my husband isn't going to get a divorce, and we haven't had a cross word yet!" she finished.

Mary Paige's soft eyes filled. She reached in her purse for her best handkerchief—one that Cathie had given to her. For just a moment the stiffness seemed gone. "Just what I told her!" she said triumphantly.

Cathie reached for her own handkerchief. In a minute she'd have her head in her mother's lap, telling all about Chester, and the dreadful quarrels. But Mary Paige had turned to her other daughter. "And aren't you going to tell your news, dear? Cathie, there's good news, too. Ruth is—pshaw. I'm as bad as Mrs. Hennessy. A leaky faucet . . . Tell her, Ruth, before I do!"

Ruth flushed scarlet, then she half giggled and sat up very straight. "Oh, it's awfully soon to be telling it. . . . But Mr. Browning and I—you know, Phil Browning. You've heard me speak of Mr. Browning, Cathie?"

Mr. Browning! Just as if everyone that knew Ruth hadn't been hearing about him for three years!

"Well, Mr. Browning has received an appointment in the English department of the college, and he . . . well . . . he and I—"

Ruth to Marry

"They're going to be married," Mary Paige cut in. "Ruth and Mr. Browning!"

"We've decided to be married very soon. I'm taking ma to live with us, and we're going to rent the house furnished and put it up for sale."

"I hope you'll be very happy," Cathie said. She didn't know why it should be so embarrassing, why it should be so hard to talk to Ruth, who had been so close to her once, but it was.

"I'm coming to live with them so Ruth can take some special courses at the college herself," Ma volunteered.

"Yes. I feel I owe it to Phil," Ruth said. "I've had little enough education, goodness knows. Just normal. And Phil Browning is a college man. So I'm not going to be one of these STUPID wives!"

Cathie looked down at her hands, lying idle in her lap. Ruth's eyes were on her again, studying her dress. It was one of those "simple" chiffons that look inexpensive, and aren't . . . a blue-gray, with a bertha of some delicate ochre-colored lace that dipped low in back, like the long, trailing skirt. From the dress Ruth's eyes wandered to Cathie's hair, her light brown hair that looked golden now. And then she looked at the Persian rugs, scattered on the dark oak floor, at the beamed ceiling, and the log fire burning lazily . . . just for show, with the long windows on the balcony open to admit the afternoon sun and air . . . and the warmth that had welled in her heart for a moment turned cold again. Cathie had so much . . . she and Phil Browning would have so little . . . no simple chiffons, no Persian rugs for her on Phil's $1,800 a year . . .

Cathie Feels Hurt

"Show Cathie your ring, darlin'," Mary Paige was urging, and Ruth flushing dark red again, stuck out her hand, with the little diamond in its ornate white gold setting—(she didn't like it very much herself!)—and said: "Oh, YOU won't like it. It isn't anything like your emerald cut diamond!"

The bitterness in her sister's voice made Cathie wince. "It isn't the size that matters!" she said sharply.

"Oh, it's all very well for you to talk!" Ruth returned quickly. "You—you with everything!"

Cathie felt her eyes stinging with angry tears. She thought, hopelessly, "It's no use . . . we've lost each other . . . it's no use . . ."

It was a relief when they had gone, hardly tasting the tea and cucumber sandwiches that the Chinese lily had brought. It did not have the savor of the teas they had so often on the kitchen table at home . . .

Cathie sat alone by the tea table, in the gathering dusk, thinking it all over. Where did Mrs. Hennessy get the crazy idea about the divorce? . . . And Ruth and Ma coming like strangers to ask her about it . . . oh, that hurt . . . that hurt . . .

She poured herself another cup of tea, but it didn't help. She felt worse every minute. And then the door opened, and Gordon Moore came in, "Hello! Any tea left?"

"Lots!" Cathie sprang up hastily, wiping her eyes.

"Looking kind of low, Cathie."

Comforted by Gordon

She smiled, rather unsuccessfully. "Yes. Pretty low. Gordon Moore, I was never so glad to see anyone in my life." She took his hand, and held it for a second against her cheek.

"Why, what's the matter?" He was a little taken aback. Her curious frankness was something that he had not quite gotten used to. It made him feel that he was dealing with a child.

"Oh—nothing I could explain. Just low. Have a sandwich?"

"Lonely?" he persisted, studying her small, troubled face, thinking again of that first day, almost a year ago, when he had first wondered about her.

"No—no, my mother and sister were just here. They've been here most of the afternoon."

"Family fight?"

Cathie shook her head, staring into the cup of tea she had poured for sociability's sake. After awhile her chin quivered, and two large tears formed in her eyes.

"Tell me," he begged.

She shook her head again, struggling to keep back the fast flowing tears. "I can't tell it. There isn't anything to tell. Only we used to be . . . so close . . . all of us together, and now that I'm married, the . . . the things I have . . . have come between us. And they can't see that they really don't matter to me . . . all—this!" She made a wild gesture—the room, her gown.

The tears rained through her shielding hands. She lifted her streaming face and a ghost of a smile twitched at her mouth.

"You see, I really married to help them," she said. "I suppose that's what hurts so much . . . that in doing it I lost their love—"

He couldn't stand it. He couldn't stand it for another moment. He lifted her into his arms and held her close, comforting her, murmuring endearments he did not think he knew.

From the region of his shoulder her sobbing ceased. "Oh, I shouldn't let you . . . I shouldn't let you hold me in your arms. But it helps so! Oh, Gordon, if only it could have been you!"

Master Mysteries
By ARTHUR HOERL

The Mysterious 3-Z

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

Anton Kasper, a small shopkeeper, is murdered while on a petting party. A mysterious person, signing himself "3-Z," writes to the newspapers admitting the crime. He tells of a second murder. Mae Ryerson, Kasper's companion, sticks steadfastly to her story of a man with "fish-eyes." Philip Armour is found murdered in a car near the scene of Kasper's death. The scene is a dead-end street. On one side is a farm house, on the other a second short street with three cottages, and beyond that the Kings Asylum for the Insane. The girl companion of Armour is found by the police and arrested. Belle Walsh, the girl, tells a story identical to that of Mae Ryerson. The police start an investigation at Kings Asylum. The chief clerk suggests a rollcall with both girls present. Floyd Esper, a paranoia case, escaped six months previous. A third murder is circumvented by the police. Floyd Esper is found and arrested. Faced by the two girls, they state positively he is not "3-Z." Esper is returned to Kings Asylum. Dale explodes the "mysterious papers" hoax. As yet not a single definite motive is uncovered. The rollcall at the asylum is without result. On the short street, near the scene of the second crime, a Mrs. Innes, discovered with a Dr. Hammel, tells of having been held up by "3-Z." This was prior to Kasper's murder. They escaped by driving off suddenly before the mysterious intruder could act.

Now Go On With the Story.

CHAPTER VI.

City Editor Bailey had a letter to show Dale when he arrived at the office. It was from 3-Z and purported to be his last. "Dear Sir, (it began)

"The last document NH 5-4-55 returned to us. My mission is ended.

"There is no further cause for worry. Anyone breaking the rules of the Supreme Council is marked for death. The thirteen men and the one woman were dismissed from the order for treason. They stole the documents mentioned and were using them for blackmail. But now they are all surrendered.

"Who am I? Not much. An ex-German army officer of the Wilhelm St. office, Berlin.

"Quiet your people and tell them 3-Z is no more.

3-Z."

"Well, I never knew a German to spell Wilhelm without the second 'l.' Inclined to be just slightly illiterate. He probably meant he's an ex-army officer and not an ex-German. All that stuff about papers is a lot of rot anyway. I think our Mr. 3-Z is finding the going a little stiff and decides to run to cover."

"Do you want to take this letter to Capt. Blake?"

"I wish you'd send it by messenger, chief—there are two important interviews I want to get in tonight. With this letter the police will have to move fast or Mr. 3-Z and his case will sink into oblivion before they catch him."

After he had written his daily story about the 3-Z case Dale went back to Brooklyn. He went first to the little home where Mae Ryerson lived with her mother. Because of the young woman's hysterical condition Dale went about his questioning in a very careful manner.

He felt certain she was withholding some important information and Dale had made up his mind to get it. It was more difficult than he imagined but finally after almost an hour the girl broke down and confessed the truth!

3-Z had not, as his letters had stated, and as she had steadfastly held, acted the perfect, courteous gentleman after killing Anton Kasper. There had been a great deal of space given in the newspapers to the fact that Mr. 3-Z was a gallant when dealing with the ladies who accompanied his victims on their last excursions.

This was now dispelled by the confession of Mae Ryerson. 3-Z, after committing murder, had deliberately, brutally and wantonly attacked her, and then led her, in a semi-dazed state, to the bus line. Under threat of death if she gave any sign, he rode with her to the elevated station and there disappeared.

Outside of the deaths themselves this was the most startling development in the mysterious case of Mr. 3-Z.

Robin Dale decided to keep the information to himself for a short period longer. He drove from the Ryerson home to that of Belle Walsh. He told that young lady what he had just learned from Mae Ryerson with the hope that she would confirm the same treatment at the hands of the murderer.

Miss Walsh was of the opinion that such was the action 3-Z was about to take when she started to pray. This fact, and the cross she wore, caused the man to desist. However, he warned her to make no outcry on the way to the bus line and he walked with her to that point and then disappeared.

It was after midnight when Robin Dale returned to his apartment on West Seventy-second street. He immediately called police headquarters and asked them to get in touch with Capt. Blake, wherever he was, and convey the message to him to call Dale's apartment.

Fifteen minutes later Capt. Blake was on the telephone.

"Hello, captain. Make yourself comfortable because it will take a little time for me to make this speech. I've finally gotten to the motive of this 3-Z case. Sex starvation, I think you'd call it."

And Dale went on to explain the result of his interviews with the women in the case.

"That certainly clears up some of the haze. I imagine you've got something else on your mind."

"Did you see the latest letter—came out in the late editions? It only confirms our suspicions about that document hoax. This last letter was evidently written without the deliberation he gave the others—rather as if he rushed to get it in the mail and call quits on the whole thing.

"The secret society reference is almost childish. He has misspelled a few words and shows a decided lack of knowledge of what he is writing about, especially that German officer bunk. He abbreviates strasse by writing it st.—it's always abbreviated str.

"However, we can almost forget all that twaddle now that the actual motive is apparent."

"Well, we have the motive, all right," said Capt. Blake, "but that might fit any one of a thousand persons in the vicinity of the crimes, and if we happened to take in a larger territory, we'd be years sifting through the suspects."

"That's true, captain—but I'm sure it isn't going to be as bad as that. While, in its general aspect, the case might fit any number of suspects, you'll find many of them eliminated by applying some of the truths we know about it . . . for instance, the use of the reference heading in one of the letters, the size of the revolver, the county clerk's stationery, the authoritative note in the letters, the type of literature the criminal reads, the fact that he is unmarried or separated from his wife, that he is unprepossessing in appearance or he would surely find some woman to interest herself in him without killing their escorts for that purpose . . . oh, there are a number of things, any one of which might fit any number of people but the combination of which surely must apply to only a very few. Out of such a few suspects it won't be difficult to pick the guilty man.

"I have some ideas where we can look for him, captain, but maybe you'd like to think it over tonight. Suppose we get together at your office in the morning ready for action?"

"Okay, Dale—but if you have any suspicions hadn't we better jump to it right now? He might get away."

"I'm afraid your man is too sure of himself to even attempt to go away. If he's gone you'll find it fairly easy to trace him. I wouldn't worry much about that.

"Oh, one other thing, Capt. Blake—we'd better have the young ladies along tomorrow in case our trail leads in the right direction. Okay, see you about 9 in the morning. Goodnight—I'll have one on you before I kick in, wishing ourselves luck."

(In what direction did Dale's suspicions point? Who worked at the County Clerk's office and got the fatal stationery? Could it have been an official at the postoffice, thus accounting for the mailing of the letters without apprehension? Can you figure out who might be guilty of the petter-murders? Read the solution in the Sun-Telegraph, a week from today.)

SOLUTION TO

Who Killed Bob Adair?

By ARTHUR HOERL

Capt. Blake sat at the head of the table in the meeting room of the Adairs, shortly before 8 o'clock on the morning Gerald Adair was murdered. At his right was Robin Dale, behind him Jardin and two other of his men from headquarters. The Adairs were all assembled—even Dedrick and his wheel-chair—Augusta, Belfridge and his wife, Nancy, Suzanna . . . all but young Roderick.

Robin Dale rose and looked over their stoic faces. He addressed Blake as he began.

"This is a theory, Capt. Blake, but I'm afraid the only theory which can be made to fit the two crimes which have befallen in this household. Upon what I am about to say you can form no basis for arrest, but it is better that these people, here assembled should know that their secret is a secret no longer. Only their admission that what I will now tell is true will permit you to place the guilty under arrest . . . I fear they will not admit.

"The question of family honor is the moving force behind these crimes . . . a creed of honor so firmly rooted that the very creed condones even the killing of one who breaks its shackles. That is what Bob Adair did! He was on the verge of dishonoring the name of Adair! . . . even worse, bringing shame upon another Adair as well as himself!

"That other one was Nancy Adair!"

Dale paused. There was no sign from a single member of the band of Adairs. Only, across the face of Belfridge's wife, there crept a pallor which remained there the while Robin Dale spoke.

"The feeling that Bob Adair finally showed toward his brother's wife was reason sufficient for the first crime. All that was very simple . . . Gerald knew, and practically told us, in his crazy way. But who was the instrument of this honor-rimmed justice?

"Bob's own epitaph told the first part of the riddle, and that written for Gerald told the rest . . . each of the family came in turn, and the arrangement was as simple as A, B, C—for it was just that. A, the first, then B, and so forth.

"Augusta Adair was the first chosen . . . there was nothing criminal to her shooting Bob, rather was it the upholding of honor. Bob knew what the sentence had been, and he was waiting.

"Gerald, lacking something of the intelligence of the others, yet knowing their secret, would have explained if the second to sit in the judgement seat—Belfridge, that was . . . had not put him beyond power to speak." (*)

There was a long silence. What was Capt. Blake to do? How could he prove what Robin Dale had just set forth? The silence was shattered by the voice of Dedrick Adair.

"Wise men learn more from fools than fools learn from wise men. And what, captain of the police, are you going to do?"

As it turned out, Capt. Blake could do nothing at all.

(*) Two years later Robin Dale's entire theory of the Adair crimes was confirmed by Nancy Adair, who finally, a nervous wreck, escaped from that house of terror. Every detail of Dale's explanation was corroborated. Peculiarly enough, Augusta Adair's testimony was worthless because it could not be used against her husband. Early in 1930 Belfridge Adair was placed in an asylum for the violently insane from which, the doctors state, he will never come forth.

NOTED POET TALKS ON RADIO TONIGHT

The Loudspeaker

Rivers Give Tunes.
McNamee Blunders.
Altrock Grateful.
Show at Garden.

—By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Most of the successful songs of the world are concerned with rivers, romance and roses. And the saddest of these are the river tunes.

Louis Reid

The Mississippi, the Swanee, the Shannon, the Danube, the Rhine, the Volga, the Saskatchewan, only heaven and Damrosch know how many more have ever given to the tunesmiths the tearful eye and the drooping mouth. And the crying continues and will continue, in all probability, until the last songwriter is gathered to his fathers.

It may be that musical inspiration is found in the slow and majestic flow of the rivers, or in the eternal lapping of their waters, but I have a notion that it really lies in the names and the romance that have been given them by man. The most singable names are those of rivers, and any song written of them which possess a fairly ingratiating melody and a heart throb or two is bound to be successful.

Money Flows From River Songs

Were I to open a song shop tomorrow, my first task would be to find a good song about a river, knowing that when my search was finished I could retire to a carefree senility at—what is the name of that French resort, Jenkins, that is now the vogue? Oh, yes; Juan les Pins. Just a doddering but contented dodo at Juan les Pins.

The embarrassments of the high priests of the microphone have ever been a fruity subject of research. Of all the army of the ether, the attention-callers can probably show the most embarrassing moments. Graham McNamee, of course, has had his share, particularly in his early days when he used to report for work in the old WEAF studio in lower Broadway.

McNamee recalls one incident of those days. Upon announcing a vocalist he turned to converse with friends in the studio. Someone passed and left the door ajar. McNamee yelled:

"Please close the door."

Instantly there was a clamor of voices.

"Mac," they said, "that went out on the air."

The announcer had forgotten to throw a switch.

McNamee Spoke Out of Turn

McNamee turned to, rectify his error, but another staff announcer shoved his head through the door and shouted:

"Mac, that went out on the air."

He was visibly purturbed by this time. He shouted at the intruding announcer,

"Shut that door or I'll break your neck."

That, too, went out on the air. Radio fans flooded the mail to inquire whose neck McNamee had threatened.

One time during a world series McNamee casually mentioned to a huge network,

"I guess I'll be heading back to Pittsburgh tonight. I hope that hotel has a room reserved for me."

McNamee did go back to Pittsburgh that night and arrived to hear an irate hotel manager berate him. Pittsburgh ear-cuppers had assumed the responsibility of checking his reservation, and the hotel manager was forced to keep his telephone operators overtime answering irritating queries.

Of all the mail McNamee has received during his seven years on the air, he prizes most a letter from Nick Altrock, the baseball clown. It read in part:

"Gramm Mackamee, dear sir and etc:

"I want to thank you for broadcasting me on your radio set as I have never been broadcasted before and didn't realize what a pleasure it was. Me and my partner, Al Schaedt, which is a name you spell the best you can, are both deeply grateful, but I think I am the most considerate.

"Al and me both worked hard to amuse these forty-five thousand people who had been sitting in the rain for three hours waiting for the sun to do something bright. I thought Judge Landis would fall out of his seat when I was swimming from second to third base.

"I want to repeat that I want to thank you again in the first place. My partner, which is still Al Schaedt, also wants to thank you, if possible.

"Yours on the dotted baseline, (Signed) "Nicholas Altrock."

A Big and Busy Week on the Eyes

It has been a big and busy week on the eyes at Madison Square Garden. All the vast array of radio phenomena from receiver which can record broadcast programs, talking pictures in the making, microphone artists performing in all the fabled privacy of a gigantic goldfish bowl, to robots that start and stop cars were exhibited.

"The Days of the Cave Man."
Listeners will be whisked in a second back to the days of the cave man in the Rin Tin Tin Thriller.
Rin Tin Tin and his master, a modern young man, suddenly find themselves in the heart of a great forest that existed in those early days of the world. The young man falls in love with Lightfoot, daughter of the chief of the Oak tribe, and introduces into the life of the cave men all the science of modern warfare.
There is a thrilling battle between the cave men of the Oak and Shell tribes and to climax the story the young man and his dog bring about the downfall of the great cave tiger.

By DARRELL V. MARTIN,
Radio Editor.

George Russell, Irish poet known to literature as "AE," is to discuss "Philosophy of World's Civilization" over WCAE at 9 o'clock tonight. Another good WCAE feature is the Capitol Theater Family direct from the Radio World's Fair in New York at 8 p. m. Pat Haley, Pittsburgh boy who has made good on several national radio programs and now occupies a responsible position on the staff of WTAM, is to return to his "Alma Mater"—WJAS—for a 15-minute recital at 8:15. The Soldiers' Chorus from Charles Gounod's "Faust" is on the 9:30 concert of General Electric over WCAE.

LOPEZ GUEST WRITER

Vincent Lopez, orchestra maestro, is our guest columnist today. Vincent pens impressions of people he has met about the studios, as follows:

Jessica Dragonette is one of the most intellectual stars we have. Her mentality is above the average. She is one of the best read woman stars in radio. Really very psychic and far above the average woman radio star. She's a great reader and philosopher.

George Frame Browne is a very quiet character, but a real character artist who feels his part. There is no one who can do character better than he can. I had a radio broadcast with him at WOR in "Main Street Sketches." He is a marvelous man to work with and really knows his business.

Ernie Jones and Billy Hare—good fellows, great to work with, love their work and enjoy getting new material from their radio audience. Two opposite characters—one dignified and one always joking. One with a great sense of humor and one very conservative. Two artists who have enjoyed great popularity and are still wearing the same size hat.

Floyd Gibbons—one of the brainiest men on the air, who has a great command of the English language, whose diction is perfect—has the fastest thinking brain in radio.

A very sweet character—Graham McNamee—sounds boisterous but really very reticent. Loves his work, inclined to be excitable in his announcing but really has perfect control. Does this boy like airplanes?

Last year's diction medal winner—Milton J. Cross—is very conservative and a master of the English language . . . a great favorite with the high brow audience. Reads all the time.

Two girls who are coming to the front very rapidly, really very shy, and who are always endeavoring to introduce something new, two artists that Pittsburgh should be proud of—are the 20 Fingers of Sweetness.

I'm sorry that John Young, my favorite announcer, is not coming to the Pittsburgh Radio show. He has the most human voice on the air and can take a sponsored account and make it sound personal.

Don Bestor—a gentleman, a scholar and a master of his art—sorry I will not be here to welcome him back to Pittsburgh.

My favorite broadcast—Amos and Andy. I would gladly neglect my best girl friend to listen to them. "Would you?" she said.

Rudy Vallee, the boy with the soul in his voice and America's favorite crooner.

ON A PROGRAM OF Beautiful Music

A program of beautiful music, rich, mellow, appealing, will be broadcast tonight at 7:15 from KDKA.

It is the weekly program of The Colonial Trust Company, which has been called "the program beautiful." It is played by the only string choir on the air.

Speaker:
JOHN W. CHALFANT
Vice President in charge of Trusts of The Colonial Trust Company

There will also be a Colonial Trust radio broadcast Monday morning at 11:45, from KDKA. Miss Ella Graubart, a Pittsburgh attorney, will speak on a subject especially interesting for women.

JONES, HOMANS IN FINAL

SPORT COMMENT
by JAMES J. LONG

Redbirds May Beat A's. Stronger on Attack. Macks Below 1929 Form.

Grid Customs Endure. Signs Favorable to Ens. Heavy Boxing Losses.

IMPETUS OF DRIVE HELPFUL TO CARDS

THE FACT THAT the pennant victory of the Cardinals, though not clinched until two days before the close of the season, had been assured for a sufficient length of time in advance to take much of the strain off the Redbirds and save them from the tertific pressure that a neck-and-neck race right up to the finish line would have involved, ought to help the National League's chances not a little in the world series. When the flag fight was practically a deadlock among three clubs a little more than a week ago, and it looked as if the winner would remain in doubt until the last minute, the danger loomed that the older league might again have to send a worn-out team into the title stakes. But now there is promise that that handicap will be escaped when Gabby Street begins his battle of wits with Connie Mack in Philadelphia next Wednesday.

Connie Mack.

With that obstacle to success removed, there is a prospect that the Cards will have a good fighting chance to win the series. In fact, on their form since August 1, as compared with what the A's have shown for the same period or for the season, there is reasonable ground for the opinion that the Missourians, with a fair share of the breaks, will succeed in bringing the world honors back to the National League.

SPARED THE STRAIN that took so much out of the Heydler pennant winners in recent years before they went into the post-season competition, the Cards may be helped, rather than harmed by their great rush down the stretch. On the principle of a stone rolling down hill, a ball club gathers momentum in a drive of that sort, and the impetus gained by the Redbirds may serve to carry them right through to victory in the big series.

From August 1, when they were below the .500 mark and tied with Pittsburgh for fourth place, until they clinched the pennant in the second game of the final series with the Pirates, Street's fighters made the sensational record of winning 43 games while losing only 12. That means they traveled at the whirlwind pace of .782, strongly reminiscent of the Boston Braves' great finish in 1914, and a club that has won practically 80 per cent of its games over a period of eight weeks is not likely to be stopped easily.

BESIDES, THERE IS reason to doubt that the A's are as strong as they were last year, or as strong as the Yankees were in the preceding two seasons. They were not so impressive at several stages of the campaign and had difficulty in holding their own with strong clubs like the Senators and Yanks.

Gabby Street.

Neither has their attack measured up to that of the National League champions. Simmons, Cochrane, Foxx and Miller have been their only .300 hitters, whereas all of the St. Louis regulars and reserves except Bottomley and High have batted above that figure. So has the St. Louis club as a whole, while the A's never got far above .290, running generally about 20 points below the Cards.

THAT INDICATES QUITE a difference in collective punch. Hitting against pitchers of the rare caliber of Grove and Earnshaw is another thing again, it is true, but these two can't pitch every day any more than Simmons, Cochrane and Foxx can be at bat all the time, and besides the A's are not likely to run up any huge batting figures against Grimes, Hallahan, Haines, Rhem and Johnson. The Mackmen's strength is mainly in their defense. You can't win ball games without runs, and the Cards figure to make a better run average than the American Leaguers.

EVERY MAN IN the St. Louis lineup is fast in addition to being a good hitter, and the fact that Bottomley is the only left-hand batter used when a left-hand pitcher is faced will not make things any easier for Grove or Walberg. There are said to be spots that Grove doesn't like. For instance, though starting 32 games this year he started only twice against the Yankees and did not begin a game against them after April 22. Perhaps the Cards will prove another of those spots.

Neither do the Redbirds suffer by comparison in a fielding sense. Their infield is unquestionably better than Philadelphia's, their outfield is at least as good except in left, and they have a first-class catcher in Wilson even though he is not the equal of Cochrane. The only positions in which the A's hold the edge are those filled by Simmons, Cochrane and Foxx, and Foxx's superiority over Bottomley is only in hitting. Add the sparkle, dash and fighting spirit that the Cards possess, and there is a combination that has a fine chance to bring home the victory overdue for a league that has won only one game in three years.

THEY MAY CHANGE the rules of football but the human customs remain the same. Hope that springs eternal in the football breast differs little in 1930 from that of 1890. Then, as now, they had "September champions." Before the season opened they could see nothing but success out ahead. And then, as now, they were just as full of alibis at the finish.

Bob Higgins

That there is nothing new in statements now being issued as the 1930 season begins is shown by a glance at some old issues of "LaVie," college year book of Penn State, where Bob Higgins brings in a new coaching regime this fall.

"WITH MANY OF the old men back we have every right to expect that the coming season will be one of advancement," says the 1894 book. "With hard, conscientious practice, the team of 1894 should meet with nothing but success. We claim first place in colleges of our class for 1893, for no college in the country, taking size into consideration, had a better record than ours. It is much to be regretted that we were unable to meet the Princeton, Naval Academy and Cornell teams." Many a college will this November bewail the fact that it had no chance to play another team being hailed as national champions. And many are the schools that expect "the new season will be one of advancement."

NINE YEARS LATER "LaVie" reports that "the season of 1902 was the most favorable one in the history of the college. We faced the opening of the year with a feeling of uncertainty and dread. The new material might develop good men and might not. Any real practice was impossible before the eighteenth. The first game was with Dickinson Seminary and the Williamsport boys gave our team a good hard practice.

"The second game, with W. U. P. (now Pitt), was a good game, th. Western boys having come with a determination to score if possible. Happily for us, they failed to attain their object. The game with University of Pennsylvania we would rather not say much about. It might be described with the well-worn sentence, 'the team played well,' provided you read between the words. We should have won, but did not, and that is all we care to say." And at the end of the

With Duquesne University's 27-0 victory over Slippery Rock Teachers' College at Forbes Field last night entered into the records, the Bluffites have two of their battles out of the way and will sit back and rest as Pittsburgh's two other college elevens pry off the lid this afternoon. The Dukes ushered in their season Friday night a week ago with a 7-0 defeat by the strong West Virginia University eleven, also in a night game.

The University of Pittsburgh Panthers make their first appearance in the Stadium this afternoon in a tuneup contest with Waynesburg (Pa.) College, which last Saturday lost, 7-0, to Slippery Rock. Last season, Pitt also opened with the Yellow Jackets and romped off with a 53-0 victory.

While Pitt is monopolizing the local limelight, Carnegie Tech makes its season's bow at Buffalo against the University of Buffalo eleven. This contest also is regarded in the light of a practice test for the locals.

EYES ON HELLER

Principal interest of the fans at the Stadium today will center about the exploits of the highly-touted Warren Heller, sophomore halfback star from Steelton, Pa., whose work during the training season has been of such a sensational nature that he has been able to crowd the veteran Whitey Walinchus out of a starting berth. He will be paired with Josh Williams. Capt. Eddie Baker will be at quarter and Jim Clarke at fullback when the starting signal sounds at 2 o'clock, rounding out one of the lightest backfields in Pitt history, averaging less than 170 pounds.

With the exception of Allegheny College, of Meadville, all of the college teams in the tri-state district will be in action over the week-end. The Methodists do not open their season until next Saturday.

W. VA. TEAMS CLASH

West Virginia and West Virginia Wesleyan put on their annual state classic at Morgantown today with the Mountaineers, as usual, the favorites. The tie with Broaddus last week didn't help Wesleyan's prestige, although it may serve to bring up the team to a fighting pitch today.

At Lewisburg, Pa., Geneva College, of Beaver Falls, meets a formidable foe in Bucknell, with the Bisons favored to take over the Covenanters. Geneva started off on the right foot last week by nailing St. Vincent, but will find in Bucknell a veteran tried foe.

Bethany assists in the opening ceremonies at Washington, Pa.,

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE BURNING SEA OF SANTORIN—Santorin is the name of a group of islands forming a part of insular Greece. The islands are merely a circular range of volcanic peaks, encircling an active crater which is submerged in the sea, forming a bay about 900 feet deep. The bottom of this bay is perpetually on fire, and minor eruptions occur with great regularity. There was an eruption in 1866, when flames 25 feet high issued from the sea, and ashes rose to a height of more than 5,000 feet. This constitutes one of the oddest examples of volcanic activity on record. THE ORIGIN OF "HURRAH"—Hu Raj (Hurrah) is Ukrainian in origin. It was in this country, known as Little Russia, that the curious outlaw organization named Cossacks (Free Men) came into being in the sixteenth century, and this was their favorite war cry. The literal translation of "Hu Raj" is "Paradise." THE STOLL FAMILY OF FORT BRIDGER, WYOMING—George Stoll was born April 20, 1867, when Fort Bridger was in Utah territory. William Stoll was born April 13, 1868, in the same place and house, after that land lying east of the Wasatch Range was surveyed into Dakota territory. Lizzie Stoll (Kirkendall) was born June 8, 1871, in the same house but in the territory of Wyoming, this territory having been established July 25, 1868.

CARNEGIE SET FOR BUFFALO

By JESS CARVER,
Staff Correspondent.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 27. — Prohibition notwithstanding, a hefty consignment of Scotch was run into this metropolis today. Said Scotch will be used in enlivening and christening the 1930 gridiron season, which gets under way this afternoon as Carnegie Tech and the University of Buffalo pit their respective varsity elevens against each other in the Bisons' stadium.

The Carnegie squad, under the expert chaperonage of Clarence (Buddy) Overend and Coaches Waddell and Steffen, arrived here at midnight after a fast run from Pittsburgh. The boys were tumbled from their drawing room and chair cars and taxied to the Hotel Statler where Tech headquarters have been established.

ROYAL WELCOME

Buffalo is prepared to tender the Tartans a royal welcome as far as the civic fathers are concerned. What the local footballers have in store is another matter

Mayor Roesch yesterday issued an official proclamation, urging local citizens to cooperate with the university in its home-coming program, which not only celebrates the eighty-fourth year of its existence, but brings to the city the nationally famous Tartans of Carnegie.

The University of Buffalo this afternoon will boast a hefty line and a fast and rangy set of backs, including Eddie Malanowicz, who ran 97 yards last year against Hobart for a touchdown. The locals employing the Notre Dame system, are coached by E. W. Lee, a close friend and faithful pupil of the great Rockne. Buffalo boasted

GIZZY BEATS SMALLWOOD

By JAMES MILLER

One of the best cards fur action ever inoulded together in this district opened the indoor boxing season at the Moose Temple, downtown, last night.

Every bout on the program was crammed full of spirited milling, although the crowd that attended was nothing to cheer about.

Battling Gizzy, the perpetual motion machine, of Donora, slammed out a decisive 10-round win over Chet Smallwood, Akron southpaw, in the main bout.

SMALLWOOD FLOORED

It was all Gizzy, with the exception of the third round, which was even. Smallwood started the bout by poking his right and left into Gizzy's head and body, getting an early lead, but the battler came back in the latter part of the round to even things up.

Smallwood was on the floor twice in the sixth round. His first visit to the canvas resulted from a right hand punch on the nose and he was up without a count. The second trip to the resin came from another right, this time a little harder, and he took a toll of three. These were the only knockdowns of the fight. Smallwood weighed 132½ and Gizzy 133¼ pounds.

Billy Brent, Negro welterweight of the Hill, knocked out Mickey Solomen, of New Castle, after two minutes and 35 seconds of fighting had elapsed in the sixth round of the scheduled eight-round semi-final.

Solomen was on the floor and almost out when the bell came to his assistance in the first round. A straight hard right-hand smash found Mickey's chin near the end of the opening round and he slumped to the floor and it appeared as if the bout was over.

BOBBY BATTLES FOR SWEEP OF TITLES

sand 35 feet from the cup. Gene's long putt for a 4 stayed out. Jones putted close and got his par, Jones 1 up.

It was obvious that Homans was feeling the strain of the situation, for his face wore a grim, tense look. He smiled briefly on the tee, while Bobby's face was as untroubled as though he was engaged in a practice round with some friends down at good, old East Lake. This round really meant everything to Jones, with everything that was riding on the outcome. However, Homans proved that he could fight yesterday by coming from behind on the thirty-sixth green after being 5 down to Charley Seaver at the end of 18 holes.

Jones' semi-final assignment was much easier. He won from Jess Sweetster, 9 and 8, in a match in which he was never down, giving a display of skill that judged by the Jones brand of golf ranged from brilliancy to mediocrity and back again.

JONES' EDGE GROWS

Jones drove to rough and Homans to a trap at the long second. Gene came out to the rough and Bob hit a long iron down the fairway. Jones was barely on the green with his third and Homans was short. Jones' putt ran up the green's bank on which the pin was placed, but rolled back and each was a long way off on four. Homans 20 feet, and Jones 16. It was a half in 6s. Jones 1 up.

At the third Jones sent an iron to the green, but Homans' spoon shot was on top of a trap to the left. Homans chipped eight feet from the cup. Jones putted short from 30 feet. Homans missed his putt for a 3. Bob holed his par and went 2 up.

SCHENLEY TOPS DORMONT, 20-7

Scholastic football came into its own yesterday with most of the city teams in action. Schenley High got away to a good start by defeating Dormont, 20-7; Crafton blanked Sewickley, 20-0; Langley stopped South, 18-0; Shady Side Academy defeated Aldeidice, 7-0, and McKees Rocks whipped Oakdale, 57-0.

New Castle took the measure of Grove City, 24-0, in a night contest; Duquesne beat Monongahela, 13-0; Harding and Charleroi battled to a 6-all tie; Munhall was blanked by Elizabeth, 6-0; Swissvale toppled Rankin, 14-0, and Stowe whitewashed Coraopolis, 12-0.

In another night contest, Scott High, of North Braddock, set down Bellevue, 19-7, while Braddock lost to Mt. Lebanon, 27-0.

HOMESTEAD GRAYS LOSE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—The Lincoln Giants defeated the Homestead Grays, of Pittsburgh, 6 to 4, here yesterday. The Homestead nine has won four games and lost two in the six games of their series already played.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 27.—A big and noisy parade in honor of the new champions of the National League was on in St. Louis this morning. The town is in a joyous state over the heroic Cardinals, who yesterday brought one of the great flag drives in baseball history to a victorious close. The populace acclaims Gabby Street and his great athletes, and when the present racket settles down there will be a wild scramble for seats for the World Series battles with the Athletes, the champions of baseball's vast domain. The Cards beat the Pirates, 10-5 yesterday.

CARDS BEST CLUB

That the best club in the National League will represent the circuit in the titular fights that begin in Philadelphia next Wednesday, is the firm belief of most persons who have watched the various contenders in action. The Cuts are a scrappy team—you cannot take that away from them; the Robins have flashes of championship form; the Giants, aside from the pitching department, are a great organization, and the Pirates, at full strength, loom up as one of the best clubs in the sport, but the Redbirds are the best-balanced club in the league.

Gabby Street now faces the rather stern problem of keeping the Cardinals in the fine form they have displayed in the month gone by. As the Cardinals defeated the Pirates yesterday to clinch the coveted title, they were the same pounding team that swept everything in front of it in the East, but with several days in which nothing strenuous is carded, the new champs are in danger of losing some of their edge. Street, however, is an old-timer in the game, and he should know how to proceed.

GRIMES TO START

Although the titular fights do not begin until Wednesday, you can mark it down in your memos that Burleigh Grimes will be on the slab for the National League on that day; moreover, if Grimes is as good as he was against the Pirates just two days back, those Athletics are in for a rocky afternoon.

Connie Mack doubtless will pitch either Lefty Grove or George Earnshaw, who have earned the right to be called two of the greatest pitchers in the game. Neither is a fighter of the same steel as Grimes. The latter has been ailing with a severe cold and sore throat but every effort will be made to have him in condition for the big stuff.

And Sergeant Street has a whole flock of clever twirlers to follow up on Grimes, whereas Connie Mack's sharpshooters, after you name Grove and Ernshaw, are nothing to brag about. Therefore, the Cardinals' cause should be enhanced the farther the battle wages. In other words, the Redbirds should be the better club in the event the series runs to six or seven games.

TWO MORE GAMES

The Pirates are just playing out the schedule. Finishing in the second division is something new for the Buccos, but if you will look at the victories and defeats of the Pirates you will observe that they did better than many a club which has finished in the money in other years. The Pirates had enough misfortunes this summer to count them out.

The new champs and Buccos will stage two more games here to ring down the curtain finally. For today's contest, Manager Ens will call upon Charley Wood to fill the pitching role. Manager Street is likely to use one of his first-stringers during a part of the game in order to keep his first-choice pitchers on edge for the coming scraps.

Rolly Hemsley was hurt on the throwing hand in yesterday's game and he left last night for Pittsburgh, so that either Al Bool or Hal Finney will work in the two remaining contests. Lloyd Waner was unable to go to his position yesterday on account of a sore left leg, he may be excused from the two contests.

HAINES VICTOR

If fell to the lot of the veteran Jess Haines to win the contest that brought the flag to the Cardinals. Haines pitched the entire game for the Redbirds and he held the Pirates to eight hits. Ervin Brame was on the mound throughout the battle for the Pirates.

Paul Waner cracked out a homer with Lefty Dugas on the paths to give the Pirates a two-run lead in the third, but Right-fielder Watkins reached Brame for a three-run homer in the fourth and before the inning ended, the home boys had seven runs. They proceeded to play a hard, steady game and had plenty of runs to spare at the finish. Gus Suhr also connected for a four-sacker.

ENS NOT SIGNED

President Barney Dreyfuss of the Pittsburgh Pirates announced last night that the report from St. Louis, crediting Manager Jewel Ens with announcing he had come to terms with the local club to pilot it next season, was in error and that the matter of a 1931 contract had not as yet been taken up with Ens. Dreyfuss will not take up the matter until the regular playing season has ended.

The Pirate offices announced the signing of a young lefthand pitcher, John Vanusek, who will be 22 October 18, weighs 167 pounds, and is 6 feet tall, who has been hurling for an independent team known as the Canadian-American Traveling Baseball Club, which plays through the Northwest. His home is in Minneapolis and he will be given a tryout at Pasc Robles in the spring.

FLEET HALFBACK MAKES GAIN IN NIGHT GAME

Doggo Burns, the winged-footed halfback ace of the Duquesne University eleven, dashed over the goal line for his team's first two touchdowns in their 27-0 victory over Slippery Rock Teachers' College at Forbes Field last night. Above he is shown being stopped after making a first down paving the way for his second tally. The game was played in a drizzling rain.

DUKES WIN HANDILY

Slippery Rock battled stubbornly against the Dukes before a crowd of about 5,000 in last night's game, played through a drizzling rain, but was doomed to defeat the moment the Bluff regulars entered the contest with the beginning of the second period. The Dukes' second team returned at the start of the second half and the tiring aspiring teachers did well to hold off the fresh replacements of the locals in the closing stages.

The four touchdowns all had to be fought for. There was no scoring in the opening period, although the Dukes took the ball on downs on the Slippery Rock 30-yard line. They were held and a forward pass on the final down was knocked down.

An 82-yard march early in the second period brought the Dukes' first touchdown of the year. The locals gained the ball on a punt and worked it up the field on five first downs featured by two long forward passes, McCarthy to Benedict for 35 yards and another from Benedict to Pratt from the 24-yard line to the four, where the ball was given the Bluffites for interference. From this point, Doggo Burns ran around left end on the first play for the tally and Fullback Kovalchek kicked goal.

SCORE 14-0 AT HALF

The second touchdown followed shortly afterward. Benedict intercepted a forward pass and ran the ball back 10 yards to the visitors' 45. Two first downs followed, and, finally, with the ball on the 18-yard line, Burns again dashed around left end for the score and again Kovalchek place-kicked the goal, making the tally, 14-0, at the half.

The third touchdown was put over by the second team in the third period. The Dukes got the ball when Slippery Rock fumbled a punt on the Duquesne 44-yard line. A long forward pass by Cristina to Devinney carried play to 17-yard line for first down, and, on fourth down without a gain, the process was reversed, Cristina falling over the goal line as he took a spectacular pass from Devinney over left end. Cristina's try for the point was blocked.

Slippery Rock forced a break that put it in a scoring position for the only time in the game when, just before the third period ended, Westlake punted beautifully across the field and sent the ball out of bounds on the four-yard line. Abele, of the Dukes, got off a high return kick and the Dukes had to touch the ball down on their own 12-yard line. Kerr ran it to the nine, where it reposed as the final period opened with the Dukes' regulars being rushed to the rescue of the second-stringers.

Two scrimmages placed the ball on the four-yard line and then Kerr was piled up for a yard loss. On the final down, with the goal line to make, a forward pass was intercepted by Benedict, who raced the ball back to the 15-yard line. The Dukes then reeled off four first downs and were on the 24-yard line before they were set penalized 15 yards. Burns re-injured his bad knee at this stage and had to be taken from the game.

BURNS, BENEDICT STAR

Followed an orgy of fumbles by both sides, the Dukes finally regaining possession on the 26. On final down, McCarthy punted softly to the three-yard line. Slippery Rock's return punt was retrieved on the 25 and two plays later Benedict passed to Murphy, an end, who was carried out of bounds on the three-yard line. Benedict cut through for the final touchdown on the next play and Kovalchek kicked his third goal to make the final score 27-0.

The running of Burns and Benedict and the line crashing and point kicking of Kovalchek featured the battle. Mehringer, at halfback, tore off some good gains for the visitors and so did Catalo, former Fifth Avenue High star.

but the bell rang at the count of seven, saving Mickey from an early defeat.

TAKES COUNT OF NINE

Mickey went down twice in the second stanza from rights and both times for nine counts. He rallied in the next three rounds to give Brent a tough time of it, trading blow for blow.

In the fatal sixth, Brent came out of his corner and shot a stiff righthand punch that caressed Solomen's jaw and again Mickey went down for the count of nine. He got to his feet hazy and badly hurt only to run into another right that sent him sprawling to the floor for keeps.

In the second six-round bout, George Chambers, of the East End, subbing for Nick Polis, of Aliquippa, edged a win over Snowflakes Wright, Negro, of Rankin. It was a slugging match throughout with the first three rounds going to Chambers, the next two to Wright, and the last also to Chambers for forcing the issue, and landing the cleaner blows.

SENICH VICTOR

Steve Senich, of Homestead, defeated Johnny Montebano, of Braddock, in the opening six-round bout. Both fighters finished the battle with their left eyes badly cut.

Red Robinson refereed all the bouts, with Frank Brown and Al Grayber acting as judges. Max Zuegschmidt and Tommy Grant were the timekeepers. Dr. M. R. Goldman was the commission physician. Bowtie Kelly made his season's debut carrying the signs indicating the rounds.

Apples Meyers, promoter of the Moose Temple, announced he had Frankie (Kid) Anslem, Negro flyweight, of New York, who gave Willie Davies a good fight at the Meyers Bowl this summer, matched with Marty Gold, of Philadelphia, for the main bout of his next show. Gold recently defeated Black Bill at the Bowl.

Shannopin Women Beat Highland, 11-0

Shannopin's women golfers defeated Highland's fair links representatives, 11 to 0, in the first of two matches for the Thomas trophy, at the Shannopin Country Club yesterday afternoon. The concluding match will be played at Highland on October 9. The summary:

Mrs. Salisbury and Mrs. Van Der Voort, Shannopin, 3 points; Mrs. Corbett and Mrs. Langell, Highland, no points.

Mrs. Priest and Mrs. Randolph, Shannopin, 3 points; Mrs. Beals and Mrs. Fisher, Highland, no points.

Mrs. Neely and Mrs. Laurack, Shannopin, 3 points; Mrs. Hibbon and Mrs. Henderson, Highland, no points.

Mrs. Dunn and Miss Price, Shannopin, 2 points; Mrs. Richer and Miss Fielding, Highland, no points.

MY 50 YEARS IN BASEBALL

By CONNIE MACK, MANAGER OF WORLD CHAMPION PHILADELPHIA ATHLETICS

INSTALMENT NO. 18.

While I was walking around the main streets of Punxsutawney trying to restablish Rube Waddell's credit with Dunn and Bradstreet, the ponderable fact did not escape me that there might be considerable local hostility, even resistance, to my plan to carry off the celebrated southpaw to Milwaukee.

Determined not to let the Rube get out of my sight, I accompanied him to pack his grips. Then I engaged a bell hop to carry Waddell's effects to the station and check them securely. I retained the checks.

I did not want the pitcher to be seen on the streets carrying luggage, for it would be sure to send a wireless message through the town that "the Rube is taking it on the lam."

I ordered sandwiches in his room and we ate lunch there, I did not want to expose myself unnecessarily for fear of being recognized. Then I paid Rube's hotel bill and we went back to my hotel.

I studied the situation carefully, just like a general planning a battle.

Our train was scheduled to leave at 3 p. m. The station was nearby and I gave myself 15 minutes to leave the hotel, arrive at the station, buy tickets and get the Rube's grip.

COMMITTEE AT TRAIN

We followed this plan to a letter and everything apparently was going along smoothly, although every minute seemed an hour. Never did I inwardly root so hard for a train to appear as I did that afternoon in Punxsutawney.

Finally, about five minutes before train time, a group of important appearing men approached us.

My heart sank.

As they neared me, unsmiling and determined looking, I sensed there was trouble in the air. We had made some mistake and now the town knew what was up and sought to keep me from taking their attraction away.

Knowing Waddell's capacity for irregularity, I realized it would be comparatively easy for them to get out a fake warrant just to detain him, so they could talk him out of the Milwaukee project.

In a wink, I saw that all my carefully prepared plans and my prodigality in paying off all of Waddell's debts were to go for naught.

I steeled myself for the ordeal that was to follow.

SHOCK FOR CONNIE

One of the group stepped out and called me aside. He shook my hand and said:

"You are Connie Mack?" he said.

I admitted it.

"Well, my friends and I came down here to the station," he went on, to my astonishment, "to tell you that you have done us a great favor in taking Waddell out of this town."

I was so surprised and shocked that I could only mumble a reply.

Then he called over his friends and introduced them to me.

"Waddell is a wonderful pitcher, continued the spokesman, "but, on account of his eccentricities, the fans and ourselves believe that Punxsutawney would be better off without him. Nobody can control him."

In the meantime, the Rube had backed up against the curb of an iron fence at the station. He leaned over with his head on his hands like Rodin's Thinker.

He imagined that the members of the delegation, whose glances he avoided, were giving me a battle to hold him. I did not disillusion him after we had safely boarded the train.

WINS IN DEBUT

We duly reached Milwaukee, the Rube being advertised to pitch the next day. One of the biggest crowds of the season turned out and Rube gave a commendable display of airtight pitching.

He won easily, striking out a large number of his opponents. The fans roared over his antics and capers.

That made Waddell an immediate favorite and he always filled the park when advertised to pitch. After the Rube joined us, the Milwaukee club picked up in every way and we were giving the White Sox a keen battle for first place.

COPS 17-INNING GAME

Some time in August we were scheduled to play a double-header in Chicago. The first game ran 17 innings. Waddell pitched every inning for us and finally won it for Milwaukee in the final round with a triple. The score was 3 to 2.

After he retired the third Chicago man in the last half of the seventeenth, the Rube turned cartwheels from the peak to the bench with the fans yelling with delight over his buffoonery.

On account of the first game going 17 innings, Dick Padden, the Sox captain, came to our bench and suggested that we cut the second game to five innings. I had a thought and naively agreed, disarming Padden.

I then turned to the Rube.

"If you will pitch this five-inning game, instead of taking you to Kansas City you can go back to Milwaukee tonight and spend the next three days fishing at Pewawki," I said. That was a resort the lefthander enjoyed to visit.

EARNS FISHING TRIP

More than once when he made one of his frequent disappearances he would be found fishing at this place.

There was no surer way to intrigue Waddell than to give him three days off to fish. He snapped up my offer without hesitation.

Then he went out and shut out the White Sox in this abbreviated second game, 1 to 0, giving the Milwaukee club two games in one afternoon over its rival for the championship.

I didn't begrudge the Rube his fishing expedition as we left for Kansas City that night while he took a train for Milwaukee. He had thoroughly earned a rest.

Long's Sport Comment

1930 season many an alibi will be couched in similar terms, if not so frankly. And so, probably, in 2002 and 2030.

A REPORT FROM St. Louis quoting Jewel Ens as saying he had reached an agreement with Barney Dreyfuss whereby he would manage the Pirates again next year brought a prompt denial from both sides. The Buc owner said the matter had not been discussed, and Ens declared he had never uttered a word on the subject.

It is announced that a conference between President Dreyfuss and Ens will be held following the return of Jewel to Pittsburgh from the scene of the Pirates' final series. Whether or not Ens is to stay will be decided at that time. The fact that a conference is to be held at all would appear to indicate a probability of Jewel's being kept on the job for next year. A conference would not be necessary to dismiss him.

Tom McArdle.

THEY COULDN'T SELL any tickets for the unattractive Sharkey-Campolo fight in New York, so they have called it off altogether after once postponing it. Nobody is disappointed—or greatly surprised, either. The match was one-sided, didn't mean a thing, and was arranged only to keep Sharkey out of the hands of rival showmen in Chicago who would have drawn a fat gate with a bout between the sailor and Primo Carnera. The New York promoters who are rattling around in the shoes of Tex Rickard can't bring in the money as Tex did. His individual promotion genius is missed, and the public had a confidence in him which has not been transferred to any successor. Matchmaker Tom McArdle admits that for the second successive year the Madison Square Garden Corporation's outdoor ratic season has been a failure. The report for June, July and August shows a loss of $74,468. For the same period in 1929 the deficit was $102,271.

BOBBY JONES is at the last hurdle. Only Eugene Homans, whom he meets in the final at Merion today, stands between him and the United States amateur championship, the capture of which will mean to Bobby the unparalleled achievement of winning all four major golf titles in one year. That the matchless golfing machine will trip within the shadow of a goal that no player ever reached is improbable.

An opponent with the skill and the heart to win a semi-final match after being five down at the twenty-second hole and two down with only four to go, as Homans did against Charley Seaver yesterday, ordinarily could not be taken lightly. But in view of what happened in the other semi-final yesterday, in which Jones crushed Jess Sweetser, a former holder of both the American and British amateur titles, by the absurdly lopsided figures of nine and eight to go, even Homans himself may be pardoned for asking "What's the use?"

ONE WEEK BROUGHT a vast improvement in the Duquesne University football machine. In defeating Slippery Rock, 27 to 0, last night, the Bluff boys were far better in every detail of play than in the opener. Coach Layden had ironed out many of the wrinkles.

And the improvement may be expected to continue. The stuff is there and the team will come along from week to week. Much will depend, however, upon the quick recovery of Doggo Burns, whose ailing knee went back on him again. The loss of Burns' services for any length of time would be a severe blow. A real football player is Doggo. He would shine in any company.

one accomplishment last year which was shared by very few, if any other elevens. Not a touchdown was scored against the locals via the aerial route.

The Tartans will present a line-up which will include three sophomores, two of 'em in the backfield. Ted Rosenzweig and Pete Flanigan, veterans, are to start at the ends. John Highberger and Don Fletcher, the latter made over from a guard, are slated to go at the tackles. Capt. Johnny Dreshar and Hooks Sample, a sophomore, will start at the guards with Duke Ducanis at center.

McCURDY TO START

Harry McCurdy will be the lone regular from last year's backfield to hear the opening gun as a starting back. Graveno and Kavel, a set of fast stepping sophomores, have won halfback assignments and Joe Morbito, who understudied John Karcis at fullback last fall, will be in John's position this afternoon.

The advance sale of ducats has reached the 7,500 mark, with indications pretty plain that there will be 10,000 of the faithful in the Stadium by game time. As its capacity is not much more than this, it looks like a big day in football for Buffalo.

PROMISING SQUAD AT THIEL

FINE MATERIAL AVAILABLE FOR TEAM

(This is the seventeenth of an annual series of special articles written by Jess Carver, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph football writer, dealing with the prospects of tri-state district college elevens. The article on Grove City, with photos of the Grovers, will appear in Monday's Sun-Telegraph.)

By JESS CARVER
Staff Correspondent.

GREENVILLE, Pa., Sept. 27.—It might have been due to radiations of confidence from Jack Stober and Tink Rowley, athletic director and head football coach respectively here at Thiel, or a general feeling of optimism on my own part, brought about by a swell meal of creamed onions and porterhouse, but what ever it was, this year's Lutheran squad impressed me as being the most promising and formidable looking Thiel has put forth in some years.

Thiel was not struck particularly lightly by graduation, 11 of last year's squad being graduated, but the holdovers seem to have come along in great style and the freshmen prospects are unusually strong looking.

Coach Rowley, a fine fellow personally and no slouch as a coach, employing spread formation, somewhat on the order of those used by Bo McMillin when he was at Geneva, did not go so far as to predict a perfect season for his club, but looking about him, or us, as the huskies dashing up and down the field, the portly Tink allowed as how he had a pretty fair looking outfit.

FOURTEEN VETERANS

Fourteen of the squad of 30 footballers are lettermen and of the 14, five are seniors. Only two lettermen are backfield bets, but the newcomers seeking jobs are of such caliber as to make Coach Rowley confident of putting together a fine offensive quartet.

The team is being constructed around Capt. Leonard at guard, Wardle and Myers, backs, and Frampton, a veteran center. Four lettermen are on hand for end duty, with last year's star pair, Garthwaite and Kurtz, first in line for the jobs. Schemick and Paluselli, also letter winners, and Flint, a giant freshman, who may win himself a job befre the season progresses very far, complete the wing list. Flint is a demon on the defense, playing havoc with offensive tackles and No. 1 backs who aspire to take him out of plays.

Franks and Maher, veteran tackles; Hahne and Dorwart are in the race for the tackle jobs. Frank and Maher have the edge, due chiefly to their experience. Maher is the only 200-pounder on the squad, coming in at about 203 and being six feet tall.

If the center of the line is not well taken care of, it will not be because of a lack of material. Four lettermen, Capt. Leonard, Reimold, Steltzer and Knopp are scrapping for starting jobs, and Papuga, a freshman helfty has shown so much promise that he is certain to be called upon for a basket full of service. Leonard is almost a fixture, the Lutheran captain being a hard and fast charger on the offense and alert and extremely capable on the defense. Knopp, like his captain, boasting three years of service, is making a great effort to take down the other job.

SENIOR AT CENTER

Frampton, another senior, will be used at center, with Holl, an experienced understudy, held in reserve or converted into a guard, should the occasion demand.

Wardle, a consistently good punter, accurate passer and speedy ball carrier, is favored at quarterback, with the veteran Myers at full. Wardle is a cocky little fellow, smart enough and possessing real drive. Myers should have a great year. He hits hard and backs up a line well enough.

The halfback jobs are open, although Calabria, a freshman, who has also been used at quarterback, and McClure, a member of the West Virginia University freshman squad last year, are being considered seriously as leading candidates for the jobs. Calabria, weighing 160, hits with the force of a 180 pounder, has played enough prep school and independent football to know what it is all about, and is a good interferer and blocker. He figures to do what quarterbacking Wardle doesn't if he isn't used entirely at half.

Petrini, Troy, Barker, Clarke and McCauley are other halfback hopes. Their chief lack is experience. Tolbert, a little 43-pound flash, has been working out as a quarterback and may come along as a ball carrier on Tink's wide end run plays.

Bise, the former Masontown High star, will share the fullback duties with Myers, and also can be used at a halfback if necessary.

TEAM NO SETUP

Chaps of the brand of Mitchell, Schilling, Lindquist, Dimperio, Morris, Suscavish and Costan are going to be missed, naturally, but at that, Thiel is in position to look forward to a highly successful campaign among its Tristate district rivals. It does not figure to beat either Temple or Carnegie Tech, major opponents, but neither do these schools figure to run away from Thiel.

Temple University, first on the schedule, met the Lutherans in a night game in Philadelphia Friday night. Next week, Carnegie Tech will be played in Pittsburgh. Geneva and Allegheny follow each other here for games on successive Saturdays and on October 25, St. Vincent will be played at Latrobe.

The November 1 date is open, but may be filled with Wash-Jeff. This game, if it comes off, will either be played in New Castle at night or in Sharon in the afternoon.

Bethany will be played at Bethany November 8 and the annual clash with Westminster at New Wilmington November 15. Grove City assists the Lutherans in ringing down the curtain at Grove City November 27.

TEMPLE BEATS THIEL, 13-6

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Under 48 powerful floodlights and before a crowd of approximately 25,000 Temple University inaugurated night football in Philadelphia last night with a 13-to-6 victory over Thiel College, of Greenville, Pa.

Thiel made its only score in the first period and did not threaten seriously thereafter. Wardell Thiel quarterback, recovered a fumbled punt on Temple's 5-yard line and Myers plunged through the foul line for a touchdown. Myers failed to kick the goal for the extra point. The lineup:

Temple—13		Thiel—6
L. Gold	L E	Garthwaite
Hodgart	L T	Franks
Hanahan	L G	Leonard
Lipski	C	Frampton
Smith	R G	Reimold
Anderson	R T	Maher
Sutter	R E	Ruffa
Whitlock	Q	Wardle

M'CLURE KEEPS GOLF TITLE

CAMBRIDGE SPRINGS, Sept. 27.—To George McClure, Chartiers Heights Country Club mashie wielder, goes the honor of registering the first double victory in the Northwestern Pennsylvania amateur championship tournament, staged annually at the Riverside Golf Club here. McClure, who won his first title last fall, duplicated the performance yesterday afternoon when he defeated B. F. Kraffert, Jr., of Titusville, 4 and 2, in the 18-hole final of a tournament which drew the fastest field in the history of the event.

Results of the final matches in the other flights follow:

Second flight—J. N. Harper, Pittsburgh, defeated Lester White, Erie, 1 up, 19 holes.
Third flight—Herb Miller, Pittsburgh, defeated Carl Stover, Pittsburgh, 1 up, 24 holes.
Fourth flight—F. E. Douglas, Rochester, Pa., defeated Dr. Ewer, Greensburg, 2 up.
Fifth flight—A. J. Davies, Erie, defeated J. H. Young, Pittsburgh, 3 and 1.
Sixth flight—Dr. Covert, Pittsburgh, defeated H. R. Nuthall, Northeast, 1 up, 21 holes.

Fight Results

At Moose Temple—Battling Glass defeated Chet Smallwood, 10 rounds; Billy Brent knocked out Mickey Solomen, 8 rounds; George Chambers defeated Snowflakes Wright, 6 rounds; Steve Senich defeated Johnny Montebano, 8 rounds.

At Portsmouth, Va.—Bobby Godwin defeated Jake Denning, 8 rounds; Rufus Miller knocked out (technical) Henry Malin, 3 rounds.

At Chicago—Sammy Mandell defeated Tommy Herman, 10 rounds; Tuffy O'Dowd defeated Ted Rose, 8 rounds; Harry Fierro and George Nate drew, 8 rounds.

Mr. and Mrs. John MacFarland and family wish to express to the many friends their heartfelt thanks for the tokens of sympathy tendered them during their recent bereavement of daughter Ruth.

In Memoriam 1-B

IN LOVING MEMORY of Myrna J. Darby, who died one year ago today, September 27, 1929.
I cannot say, and I will not say
That she is dead. She is just away
With a cheery smile and a wave of a hand
She has wandered into an unknown land
And left us dreaming, however fair
It needs must be since she lingers there.
Sadly missed by her mother and sister.

DAILY TRUE STORY

Bellinda's Beacon

To most of the natives of Savantown, Bellinda's beacon was a sort of a mild joke.

They pitied poor old Bellinda, naturally, but the light that had shone through her cottage window every night for 30 years for a lover supposedly lost at sea seemed to be carrying fidelity very much too far.

Bellinda could have married any one of a dozen fine, industrious young men. Bellinda could have married them if she hadn't a penny, because at that time she was unusually beautiful, like some modern Helen in figure.

But she had also inherited a comfortable fortune, for Savantown, which did not believe in waste, from her father, the last.

Bellinda Winslow had fallen in love with Bert Moody. Bert was a second mate on a fishing schooner at the time. Bert was fond enough of Bellinda — any pretty girl attracted him, for that matter. Bellinda was a commanding sort of girl, and when Bert began to go about with her a little at such time as he was home from the Grand Banks, she took it for granted that he was courting her seriously and that he had no other goal than matrimony.

Almost before Bert knew it he was engaged to Bellinda. He couldn't tell for the life of him how it happened. He had been spooning with Bellinda — it would have been called "petting" today—and the next thing he knew she was discussing a wedding day with him. She told of their engagement, and Bert didn't have the heart or the courage to deny it.

When Bellinda Winslow set her heart and her mind on anything she generally got what she wanted or achieved what she had in mind.

She looked forward to the summer when, she informed Bert, they would be married.

Bert, weak in will power, agreed.

Fails to Return

But Bert discovered that he didn't want to marry Bellinda. There was a girl away up in Shorehaven he had been really in love with for more than a year.

He began to get somewhat desperate. They were soon to sail for the banks for a long fishing trip. They would put in at Savantown first on their return. Bellinda would be at the dock, to greet him, and there would be no escape.

Bert decided on what he considered to be a master stroke of diplomacy. Instead of going up to Shorehaven to sail on the schooner Hattie J, he kept right on to Glastonbury, where he signed on as third mate on a fishing craft that never did put in at Savantown.

Although the Hattie J sailed from Shorehaven, her owner's home, she always stopped first on the return at Savantown because there was the railroad and the depot for the fish.

"We'll be married, Bertie dear, the very week you get back," Bellinda assured him before he departed.

"Yes, Belle, if nothing happens to me, we will," he agreed. But he intended that something should happen to him—and that would be marriage with pretty little Susie Polk up in Glastonbury, and he would never dare come back to Savantown again.

The fishing schooner Hattie J did not come back with the others of the Savantown fleet. In fact, she hadn't been spoken by any of the fleet since just before the terrific storm that died down after three days and turned into a week of fog as thick as butter," the fishermen declared.

Weeks passed into months.

The Hattie J was not heard from.

Wives of men who had sailed on her began to put on black and announced themselves as widows.

"Something happened — the Hattie J got plowed clear across to Greenland—they're frozz in or something—the Hattie J will come back," Bellinda declared.

She kept a light in her northeast window all night every night. This light could be seen away down Savantown harbor and bay.

The years slipped on and on. Electricity took the place of kerosene. Bellinda, whose fortune had increased gradually all this time, put in electricity and had a special electric lamp installed in this northeast window.

Name on Memorial

The years continued to pass. Bellinda's older friends tried to argue with her during the first five years. The Hattie J had foundered and all souls were down in Davy Jones' locker, they declared. There was no doubt about it. Estates of the heirs of those who sailed on the Hattie J. had been administered. Life insurance had been paid. Every man of the crew was considered dead, not only legally but by everyone in Savantown—except Bellinda.

"Bert said he would come back—Bert wouldn't lie to me," Bellinda declared. "We are to be married the moment he gets back—he could hardly wait to have the trip over with—he told me himself that it would seem like an awful long trip to him," she would declare.

And Bellinda's beacon shone out across the harbor bay every night.

"Bert will know by the light that I am waiting for him," Bellinda declared.

Bert Moody did not go down on the Hattie J., as one who reads this knows quite well. Since he hadn't shipped on her for that fatal trip he couldn't very well have gone down.

Bert had gone to distant Glastonbury and married pretty little Susie Polk, whose mother was wealthy and set him up a very profitable ship chandler's business.

Since Glastonbury is some 600 miles away from Savantown and the Savantown fisher folk do not travel far other than by sea, no one from his home town had ever seen him.

His name was on the Savantown record of her fisher sons lost at sea.

Savantown people strew a pot flowers each Memorial Day at the foot of the white marble shaft set up in memory of her sons lost at sea—except Bellinda. She wouldn't do that because she said that Bert Moody wasn't lost at sea. He was coming to marry her just as soon as he could get back — he had promised.

After 30 years there weren't so many Savantown people left who remembered Bert Moody.

Bert Moody had heard about Bellinda. He had even seen the souvenir post cards of her home and beacon.

It rather amused him to think of the big Bellinda waiting for him to come back from the sea and marry her. He couldn't very well do that now, for he had been married to Susie for 30 years, he was a grandfather! His oldest daughter had twins!

Business Prospers

More than that, his only son, Bert, was now almost 29 and first mate of a big steam-trawler. This was some difference from the old windjammers Bert had sailed in to the Banks.

Bert, the elder, now prosperous with his big ship chandlery business, was very proud of his son. Bert's wife always said the boy was so much the image of his father that she sometimes would look at him and think she was 18 again and Bert had come in to court her.

In Bert's office, among scores of pictures of ships of all sorts, was the Bellinda's beacon souvenir post card.

Printed on it was simply the legend that Miss Bellinda Winslow of Savantown had been burning a beacon light in her window for a quarter of a century for a sailor lover lost at sea.

The card was issued 25 years after Bert was supposed to have sailed away on the Hattie J.

One day when Bert, Junior, was in from a profitable trip and had banked his big share, having been a first mate that trip, his father got out an old bottle of something that came down from St. Pierre, those French islands off Newfoundland. It said on the bottle, "l'Eau de Vie."

"Brandy, son. Since you are a first mate with a bank account, you are old enough to drink with me," Bert said.

The Berts, father and son, drank—more than once.

Young Bert noticed the souvenir card and asked about it.

"I'm the sailor lover," his father boasted, and he told him the story. He laughed as he told it. Part of it was the brandy and part of it was his rather shallow mind. His son had twice his intelligence and, tipsy as he was from the brandy, it didn't strike him as funny. In fact, his father dropped many notches in his estimation, and he was more certain than ever that while he had inherited his father's looks, he had the keener, more humane intelligence of his lovely little old mother.

Young Bert never forgot this. It was four years later that what seafaring men still refer to as the "big storm" came up and drove the "Piscus" 500 miles off her course.

Ship Aground

The Piscus was a steam trawler and young Bert Moody was captain and part owner of her.

He nearly foundered on sand reefs, but by good seamanship got her past them into a channel. He couldn't turn and get out to sea and more safety, he had to trust to luck in getting into some sheltered harbor where the wind wasn't powerful enough to tear out an anchor.

This was the storm that ripped out three light bouys. Bert would have known where he was if they were there. He went in with the terrific gale and thought he might be safe. There was a light ahead. He tried to avoid it—there were thumps and the "Piscus" was aground, pounding her heart out on the hard sands.

Rockets brought life savers with line guns and breeches buoys and the crew, one by one, was saved.

A bedraggled woman stood among the men.

She watched each one, in the flare of the big bonfire light, as he came, soaked and bruised and half conscious, to the bank in a breeches buoy.

The woman was Bellinda.

She had been awakened by the lifeline guns.

Suddenly, she screamed.

"Bert — Bert! I knew you'd come home to me!"

Bellinda clung to him.

"Never mind her, she's nutty. She's been burning that light for 30 years for a lover who was drowned" one of the life savers told him.

"Is this Savantown? Is she Belinda Winslow?" Bert asked. When told that he was right, he put his arm about the frantic Bellinda.

"Let's go to the house, Belinda," he cried.

They went up to her cottage. God, Bert, you were faithful. I knew it! Kiss me, dear boy!"

He kissed her. She clung and she then slipped down. Bellinda Winslow never came out of her coma. She died smiling.

WITH CONGRESSMAN FRISBY IN AFRICA!

Curious salutation with which the inhabitants of Africa greeted Mr. Frisby, whom they immediately dubbed "The Great White Elephant." Mr. Frisby, in a series of Saturday Specials, will describe his experiences among his Black Brothers.

By HORACE WALPOLE FRISBY
Washington Monument.

"HAVE you ever been in Africa?" is a question often put to me by admirers. "Why don't you go there?" snapped Mrs. Frisby one day, not knowing that I had quietly resolved, as a boy, to go thither, and no sooner had Congress adjourned than I quietly slipped off, unaware, to the jungles. I am back now, and never felt better in my life. Are there any questions? If so, I would be glad to answer them. "Were you given up for dead?" asks a listener-in. "Yes and no," is my reply. "While battling the beasts and the birds single-handed, or wading rapidly through forest and stream, I would often feign catalepsy—that is, give the lion the impression that I was asleep. It was then that I composed a little poem I would like to read at this time—

"Monarch facing Monarch!" cried the natives,
One and all,
As the Nuba saw the stranger,
Handsome, fair
And passing tall.
Mightiest among the brutes,
Here is one your claim disputes—
Now your right to reign supremest
Challenged is by one who seemest
Calm and fearless
Who's this peerless
Dauntless leader?
Let us leave it to the reader!

And so, folks, I will close my introduction and breathlessly await next Saturday, when I hope to tell you of the Ostrich Hunt which, if I do say it myself, was, heh! heh! quite a kick in the pants, as the saying goes.

Daylight saving, in the establishment of which not only in Pittsburgh but elsewhere Councilman Robert Garland played so important a part, comes to an end tonight. After 13 years it has become a fixed custom to turn the clocks ahead an hour in April and turn them back the last Sunday in September." The opposition to the plan, once so bitter, has largely disappeared, except in the rural regions. The benefits outweigh the disadvantages.

Leo Weinrott, Philadelphia attorney, who, with the backing of the Crusaders, ran for Congress on an anti-dry platform last spring, makes a good point in his letter declining an invitation to support the Liberal party. He points out that the Liberal party, with repeal of prohibition as its principal plank, has indorsed John M. Hemphill, anti-dry candidate for governor on the Democratic ticket, but has not indorsed Sedgwick Kistler, the anti-dry candidate for the United States Senate, nor anti-dry candidates for Congress. And inasmuch as it is to Congress that the people must look for repeal of prohibition, and not to the governor, who is powerless to do anything about it, Weinrott very pertinently questions the Liberal party's sincerity. Weinrott is for Gifford Pinchot, and so are thousands of other foes of prohibition, because, as he says, prohibition is not an issue in the gubernatorial election.

A praiseworthy idea was evolved by whoever originated the plan for the street exhibition to be held in connection with the Safety Congress in Pittsburgh next week. The project, worked out by a committee headed by J. Rogers Flannery, will bring something of the significance of the safety campaign to thousands who will not attend the sessions of the congress or read the addresses. More than a score of non-commercial exhibits, together with spectacular displays to run at regular intervals throughout the week, will help to spread the gospel of accident prevention.

An unpleasant impression is created by the discovery that citizens drawn for jury service have been visited and questioned by persons believed to be agents of local attorneys. The Jury Commission has taken steps to break up the practice. Letters have been sent to talesmen telling them not to submit to questioning by others than the commission's representatives. The Allegheny County Bar Association would do well to look into the matter.

For the first time since 1914, the district attorney's office is up with its schedule. As District Attorney Andrew T. Park says, that is something to be proud of. Now if the Common Pleas Court would only catch up, it would almost warrant a celebration. If no new suits should be filed, Common Pleas Court would be busy for more than a year settling the cases now on the calendar.

Jacob Dorsey, police traffic inspector, has issued to traffic policemen a new kind of tag for traffic law violations. It is said to be "fix proof." Let us hope so. The fixing of such cases by politicians who, through their influence, make arrangements whereby offenders are saved the necessity of answering for their offenses, has become a public scandal. Democracy becomes farcical when favoritism is shown in the administration of justice.

Pittsburgh motorists will be interested in the news that the Beaver Falls City Council is sponsoring a movement to extend the Rochester-Freedom boulevard through New Brighton to Beaver Falls. It is planned later to extend the boulevard in the opposite direction to a connection with the Ohio River Boulevard in Allegheny County. It would be a real relief to be able to drive from Pittsburgh to Beaver Falls via the Ohio River boulevard without having to use the streets that must now be taken in Ambridge and Freedom.

Alderman Martin J. Griffin, of the Fifth Ward, has made an impressive record in his campaign against the Clearing House lottery racket. Fifteen persons accused by Griffin's constables of "writing numbers" have been indicted by the grand jury this week. If every alderman and justice of the peace were equally active, this racket, strong and gigantic as it is, might be stamped out in Allegheny County.

Dahlia shows are one of the pleasant features of life in the Pittsburgh district at this season. The Sewickley Horticultural Society is now holding its annual exhibition. Soon there will be other shows, some conducted by commercial concerns for their employes. Dahlias are not very hard to raise and offer possibilities for brilliant accomplishments in gardening. It speaks well for Pittsburgh that so many people are interested in growing them.

The announcement at Clarksburg, W. Va., that a new coal mine is to be opened which will give employment to 1,500 miners is good news, to be sure. At the same time it is not to be overlooked that the coal industry is suffering from over-production and that a new mine will not help that situation.

Gifford Pinchot, Republican candidate for Governor, showed appreciation of civic duty when he told an audience at Doylestown he would rather have citizens vote against him in the November election than not vote at all. Vigorous efforts apparently will be needed to make some citizens go to the polls. Reports indicating apathy come from many quarters.

The municipal housecleaning that is under way in the hard coal region is worth noticing. A few weeks ago an ex-mayor of Scranton and a chief of police of Carbondale were sentenced to jail for slot machine racketeering. Now three county commissioners of Luzerne County have been dismissed from office and sentenced to jail for a year for letting a contract without advertising for bids. It is to be hoped that public officials elsewhere who are tempted to deviate from the straight and narrow path are observing what is going on.

Dr. H. Malcolm Read, of York, told the Pennsylvania Homeopathic Medical Society there are 30,000 cases of tuberculosis in the state that need hospital treatment, while there are only 10,000 beds available for tubercular patients. Such progress has been made in the campaign against tuberculosis that we are apt to forget it is still a grave problem. It is well to be reminded that the disease is far from having been eradicated. Dr. Read's statement also is a reminder that the state still lacks the welfare institutions which it was hoped to supply through the $50,000,000 bond issue vetoed by the people.

The Sport Fan's Dream

By Nelson Harding

Sporting events make fans dream
Of trying hard to swat
A baseball while astride a horse
That gallops on a yacht,
With mallet, mashie, racket, bat,
We dream of mighty flails,
At tennis, golf and horsehide spheres
As breezes fill the sails.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Don't Dodge the Issue

The drys claim the wets are seeking to destroy the Constitution. Which privilege the drys reserve for themselves.

There ain't much difference between a wet and a dry.

The dry breaks into a speakeasy like a ruffian.

The wet walks in like a gentleman.

And they both come out defeated.

A dry is only a wet whose turn it is to treat.

When you look at a politician now you can't tell what side he is on because he ain't.

They switch faster than traffic lights on a busy street.

We cannot see how a candidate can win the wet primaries and be elected on the dry ticket. But he does it with the ease and facility of a needle going through the eye of a camel.

The boys are carrying water on both shoulders. But you don't notice them sewing up their hip pockets.

The next presidential election is going to be very complicated, and bad booze is going to be the issue.

It's not only going to be the issue in America, but it is going to issue from Canada, issue from Europe and issue from Cuba.

The worst issue is going to be from Mexico. But we don't care what the issue is so long as it keeps issuing.

When a dry holds up a quart of good old gutrot and says, "This is the issue, boys," the mob is going to yell, "Well, let it issue."

It seems to us that public opinion has changed and is even wetter than before.

Some people think a dry is a wet with a headache.

And a wet is a politician who staggers faster in an effort to keep up with the times.

So you can say much for both sides. But you're foolish if you do.

What matters it if the best man wins? The worst man has the most fun. We know it is going to be an exciting election, and the candidates are going to take straddling lessons from the Colossus of Rhodes.

Isn't It So?

Even peace of mind sometimes comes in mightly small pieces.

Sometimes silence is golden, and sometimes it is guilt.

A disappointing thing about our neighbors' children is the fact that they never turn out as bad as we expect.

THE FUTURE OF MAN

By Archibald Henderson

The query which fascinates scientists, regarding the evolution of the human species, concerns the future rather than the past. Science is beginning to turn its eyes forward rather than backward. It is pretty well established that the human being surpasses the mere animal, however clever, in being able to grasp firmly and tenaciously principles of thought and action, to repeat processes thus learned, and to apply them to other allied problems.

It is also pretty generally agreed that civilized man greatly surpasses primitive man in intricacies of thought and range of observation and interest. Nevertheless, difficulties are encountered when science attempts to prove that human intelligence has appreciably evolved during the period for which we have evidence. This little moment of time, say from twenty to thiry thousand years, is too infinitesimal, in comparison with the vast duration of man's life on earth, to furnish adequate evidence on which to base conclusion.

It is reasonable, however, to infer that man will register appreciable progress in the future, if we may judge by the impressive record of the past. Two questions arise: Can man, by consciously taking thought and acting upon it scientifically, change, improve himself? Can man, of his own volition and acting, materially alter, improve, the conditions of life?

To the second question, the answer is an emphatic affirmation. By the employment of a complicated technic, steadily aiming at advance, man has brought into existence our present civilization, a culture distinctive for science and the arts. Shall the race be able to produce specimens surpassing the finest specimens of the past? On this point, Angell in his The Evolution of Intelligence, very conservatively observes:

Conceivably we shall never have greater epic poetry than that of Homer, greater sculpture than that of Phidias, greater architecture than that of the Parthenon, greater drama than that of Shakespeare, greater painting than that of Raphael and Titian, greater symphonic music than that of Beethoven. There is, however, nothing to prevent advance upon such achievements and in the range of the natural sciences at least. Thanks largely to the perfection of experimental technic and the utilization of mathematics, there seems to be literally no limit in sight to the future mastery which man may achieve over the forces of nature and consequently no limit to the alteration which he may be able to introduce to the enrichment of civilization.

Can man improve himself? To that, no categorical answer can be given. But there is reason to believe that, thus far, man has done little, from the ethnic standpoint, to improve. Bertrand Russell stresses the law of human inertia, a sort of fundamental principle of laziness. Man has a tendency to follow the line of least resistance, to do as little work as possible. A sort of cosmic laziness seems likewise to rule in the physical universe. The growing advances and improvements in the conditions of human life should greatly stimulate man's mental activities and his desires for self-improvement. From this practical point of view, concludes Angell, the evolution of intelligence may be considered as close to its beginning, rather than in any sense drawing near its close.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

The great thing in life is to live dramatically,
Otherwise life's a sad and soggy mess.

Most of our misery and crime
Is caused by our rebellion
Against that sogginess,
No matter how stupid we may be,
Nor how insensible to beauty,
We realize that there is Glory about us, and tumult, and adventure,
And we long to be part of it.
So we rebel . . . and usually ravel out
In self-pity and resentment.

Human spirits need drama and excitement
For their proper growth
As much as trees need winds and storms.
We would all be infinitely more splendid,
Generous, happy and resourceful,
If we could live life dramatically.

It is not necessary to have unusual luck
To live life dramatically,
Nor is it even necessary to Do spectacular things—
It is only necessary to take the chances
With yourself and your environment
Which life offers to every man.
If you can once get that attitude Toward your existence,
You will find charm and tang and thrill
In even the commonest experience.

Life is dull because we make it dull—
Because we have not the courage to risk danger
Or sass Destiny.
Life is colorless because we prefer
The safety of gray to the audacity of scarlet.
And then peeve because, while living gray,
We can't feel scarlet.
As a matter of fact,
Few of us live at all.
We merely exist through a long series
Of cowardly compromises and evasions.

God did not design men
To live like sour bugs,
Huddled in the darkness
Beneath a rotting log.
If that had been His intent
He would have made only sour bugs.
God needs Lindberghs and Lincolns,
Joan of Arcs and Florence Nightingales.
God needs spirits who will refect
His own abundance and His own recklessness,
Who will gamble with Him
On this mysterious job of creation—
Spirits who are willing to live wider,
Even if they die a little sooner.
God does not condemn men to mediocrity.
Men condemn themselves
By their own cowardice.
Their laziness and vanity and greed.

Live dramatically!
Live expectantly and enthusiastically!
Do not regard each new dawn
As one more tiresome demand
To get up and brush your teeth—
Greet each dawn as a challenge!

Enter each day as though you were setting out
To seek for buried treasure.
The treasure is there if you will look for it.
The treasure is there in the common things
Which you have always done.
It was the way you did them,
Not the things themselves
Which made them dull.

And greet each dawn impudently
And imprudently,
Ready to take any risk which may come.
Don't stop, look and listen.
Clutching at your petty comfort and safety
While life thunders by on the rails.
Take a chance with life,
Thunder with it!
Live differently!
Live dangerously!
LIVE!

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

I.—Straight-Line Evolution.

Now it is obvious that we ought not to assume these mysterious inward directive forces unless we are compelled to do so; unless the facts do not admit of a more intelligible explanation. And in these cases, of horse and pig, camel and rhinoceros, they certainly do.

In each example the animal is adapting itself very admirably for some particular way of life; and since the changes are manifestly advantageous, Natural Selection acting on random variation will account for them perfectly well.

H. G. Wells

Each successive stage in the horse evolution was an improvement on the last because it adapted the stock still further to a running and grazing existence.

Moreover as we have already seen, once an advance has been made in a particular direction there will naturally be a bias that way, for variations which happen to be on the line will be especially useful, while those that are off it thereby lose their value as weapons in the struggle for existence.

A mutation making for millstone ridges on the teeth would have been perfectly useless to the whale stock, which was evolving a method of straining the nutritious sea through whalebone, and the millstone would have weighed as heavily round the neck of an evolving tiger.

But such mutations were extremely useful to the developing herbivores of the Cenozoic; they had already begun to adapt themselves for grinding grass and any such improvement of their molars was of great assistance.

So that on the whole, other things being equal, animals and plants will naturally tend to evolve in straight lines.

But there are exceptions, there are plenty of cases of animals which have successfully turned aside during their evolutionary histories. Some change in themselves or in the outer world has made a new line more profitable. The evolution of elephants is an excellent example of an evolution which did not keep to one direction. Then many land types have reversed their evolution by going back to water; whales, seals, penguins, ichthyosaurs and plesiosaurs, water tortoises and turtles, water insects and some kinds of water snails are all proof that there is no rigid orthogenetic tendency in living things.

The race is always on the lookout, so to speak, for avenues to explore; when a new way of life presents itself it is seized upon. We ourselves are examples of the possible tortuousness of Evolution.

One of the most distinctive features of mammal evolution has been the development of hair, and yet we ourselves are hairless. But it can safely be said that we should never have evolved if our ancestors had not warmed themselves with hair.

Again, our later ancestors until quite recently were specializing themselves more and more perfectly for an adventurous clambering monkey-life in the trees, but we have broken away and deserted the arboreal habit.

Nevertheless it is to this habit in our ancestors that we owe the delicate plasticity of our hands, perhaps even the keenness of our sight and our upright posture.

There are, however, examples which afford stronger evidence of an obstinate orthogenetic tendency than do the horse and other ungulates. There are cases in which a race slowly and obstinately develops a character which, as far as we can see, is of no use whatever.

To illustrate this we may consider the Titanotheres, a group of clumsy browsing mammals having the build and general appearance of a rhinoceros, that rose very early in the history of mammals and rapidly attained formidable dimensions and widespread abundance before their extinction in the Oligocence Period.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The theatrical star alone no longer matters. The play is the thing. As recently as five years ago the high pressure stellar system was entrenched. A show without a "name" did not seem to have a Chinaman's chance. Astute producers would not risk presenting them.

But this season fewer stars are being exploited than ever before in Rialto history. Among successful productions running through a languishing summer were "The Green astures," "Lysistrata," "Flying High," "The Last Mile" and "Strictly Dishonorable." Each without a star.

Bill Brady's dramatic smash "Street Scene" was without even a featured player. The star system crashed with its salary top weight. With rising costs, producers found they could not meet extravagant demands of the mad butterflies, even with a well patronized play, and keep out of Prof. Cain's mausoleum.

So they began to experiment with star-less efforts and won. Stars who received from $1,500 to $4,000 a week cannot demand $750 a week these days and get it. With things as they are, producers are not likely to return to the star system.

They find a billing such as "The Girl from Brazil with Effie Eppis" is quite as effective attracting customers as "Effie Eppis in The Girl from Brazil" and far less wearing on the bankroll. Also they do not have to deal with that evanescent and explosive nuttiness dubbed temperament.

The required petting of stars by producers, too, was a worry, causing them sleepless anxiety. They had no surety the curtain might not have to be run down in the middle of a scene because some trivially sky-rocketed into a burst of dressing room pyrotechnics.

Those remembering when a play seemed impossible without a Julia Sanderson, a Mrs. Fiske, a John Drew or an Otis Skinner continue to be surprised that an athletic jeu d'esprit with a deafening horse laugh and dollar sized freckles can ack them in without a name studding the Broadway heavens in light. But it is so.

My intimacies with British aristocracy comes chiefly from jogging through Mayfair in patrician jig or having a cigaret lighter filled at Dunhill's. Yet I refuse to believe the British social purple has turned as yellow as those imported drawing room dramas in New York reveal. Each is a drama of decadence. Frederick Lonsdale is chief offender with Noel Coward a runner-up. Scat!

America's reputed nose thumbing at prohibition has seemed exaggerated to me until today. A sedate Fifth avenue store boldly displays in its window a floating bar for swimming pools and I've been home sobbing on the sofa all afternoon. The pity of it—and a store I always trusted!

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

You may have been chagrined many times because strangers have not been willing to take you at "face value."

Your efforts to be friendly have been rebuffed.

The greater your effort the greater the stand taken against you.

Perhaps you pride yourself on being straight and honorable.

The thought that another distrusts you angers you and you show it.

You think that a person ought to see at a glance that your intentions are on the square.

Take a good look at yourself in a mirror and then say whether there is much about your face that should inspire confidence on the part of a stranger.

Many faces as honest looking as yours have been found in the police courts.

This may be a shock to your pride, but it is true.

What is there about you that should cause a stranger to feel that you are honest and trustworthy, especially if that person be one who has studied the faces of many who are crooked or at least not quite straight?

Be glad to prove your worth and respect the person who does not put too much confidence in outside appearance.

If you are really honest you won't be offended though your pride suffers.

Expect to provide evidence of your good standing before you are accepted by those who are careful.
